UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION

DR. LINDA A. LIVINGSTONE
UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT
 OKLAHOMA STATE, 1982

Dr. Linda A. Livingstone began her tenure as Baylor University’s 15th president on June 1, 2017. A distinguished scholar and academic leader, she previously served as dean and professor of management at The George Washington University School of Business from 2014 to 2017 and as dean of Pepperdine University’s Graziadio School of Business and Management from 2002 to 2014.

Dr. Livingstone’s presidency marks her return to Baylor after time on the Waco campus from 1991 to 2002. She served as a faculty member and was awarded tenure in the Department of Management before serving four years as associate dean of graduate programs for the Hankamer School of Business.

While at Pepperdine, Dr. Livingstone oversaw a $200 million expansion of the school’s graduate campuses, the addition of an executive conference center and a significant increase in scholarship support for students. At GWU, she led the development of a strategic plan for the business school that built on the school’s culture of service and its unique location in our nation’s capital to enhance the school’s global focus.

A strong voice for the role of faith-based institutions in American higher education, Dr. Livingstone has established herself as a scholar in organizational behavior, leadership and creativity with deep expertise in university accreditation. She has been extensively published and cited in academic and professional outlets, with her publications including articles in American Business Review, Journal of Organizational Behavior, Journal of High Technology Management Research and the book Business and Corporate Integrity: Sustaining Organizational Compliance, Ethics and Trust. She also has served as a member of the Board of Directors of Capital Southwest Industrials, a public company traded under the symbol “CSWI” on the NASDAQ since 2015.

Dr. Livingstone’s many academic and professional accomplishments including serving as chair of the board of the international Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) from 2014 to 2015. The AACSB is the professional organization for business schools and accredits hundreds of the best business schools globally across 53 countries and territories. She chaired the AACSB Committee on Accreditation Policy from 2015 to 2016.

Dr. Livingstone is a member of Oklahoma State’s Spears School of Business Hall of Fame and was the first recipient of the Outstanding Ph.D. Alumnus Award. She also was recognized in 2015 with the OSU Distinguished Alumni Award.

A native of Perkins, Oklahoma, Dr. Livingstone played varsity basketball at Oklahoma State University, where she earned a Bachelor of Science in economics and management, a Master of Business Administration, and a Doctor of Philosophy in management and organizational behavior. Her husband, Brad, a high school history teacher, also played basketball at Oklahoma State. They have one daughter, Shelby, who is a senior student-athlete on Rice University’s volleyball team.

JEREMY COUNSELLER
FACULTY ATHLETICS REPRESENTATIVE
 STEPHEN F. AUSTIN, 1996

Professor Jeremy Counsellor is in his fourth year as Baylor’s Faculty Representative to the Big 12 Conference and the NCAA. He has been a member of the Baylor Law faculty since 2003.

Professor Counsellor graduated from Baylor Law School with honors and was a member of the Baylor Law Review, the Order of the Barristers, and the interscholastic moot court and mock trial teams. He also earned an M.B.A. from Baylor’s Hankamer School of Business and a B.A. summa cum laude from Stephen F. Austin State University.

Following his graduation from law school, Professor Counsellor served as a law clerk to the Honorable Reynaldo G. Garza of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Professor Counsellor then entered private practice in Houston, Texas, with Bracewell & Patterson, LLP (now Bracewell & Giuliani LLP), where he was an associate in the trial section. Mr. Counsellor also served as an Assistant Criminal District Attorney in McLennan County, Texas, where he prosecuted both misdemeanors and felonies.

Professor Counsellor has authored articles and presented papers on various evidentiary and procedural issues. He is also the co-author and editor of the Handbook of Texas Evidence (Civil Practice). In 2006, the President of the State Bar of Texas appointed him to serve on the Administration of the Rules of Evidence Committee. He is also the Contributing Evidence Editor of the State Bar of Texas’s General Practice Digest. In 2007, Baylor University designated Professor Counsellor an outstanding tenure track faculty member in recognition of distinguished teaching.

Professor Counsellor teaches Civil Procedure and Texas and Federal Procedure in Baylor Law School’s renowned Practice Court program. He also is a coach of the Law School’s interscholastic moot court and mock trial teams. In 2005, he was the coach of Baylor Law School’s Association of Trial Lawyers of America national championship mock trial team.

ATHLETICS ADMINISTRATION

MACK B. RHOADES, IV
VICE PRESIDENT / DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS
 ARIZONA, 1993

Mack B. Rhoades, IV, who has provided outstanding leadership and vision for three NCAA Football Bowl Subdivision athletic programs, was named Baylor University's Vice President and Director of Intercollegiate Athletics on July 13, 2016.

He has led national searches for three head coaching positions, ultimately bringing to Baylor Matt Rhule (Football) in 2016, Casie Maxwell (Equestrian) in 2017 and Brian Boland (Men's Tennis) in 2018. Rhoades has organized a team of dynamic administrators and restructured the athletics department to maximize efficiencies across teams. His concept of Preparing Champions for Life has provided the ongoing vision for Baylor Athletics, which aims to bolster the student-athlete experience by focusing on the areas of academic achievement, athletic success, character formation and spiritual growth. Rhoades has assisted University leadership in a campus-wide effort to structurally complete 105 recommendations related to Title IX and student safety.

In 2018, Rhoades announced 15 department-wide Strategic Initiatives, including a master plan for future facilities. These initiatives were established through a comprehensive review of the athletic department with the purpose of preparing student-athletes for their endeavors beyond their time at Baylor.

Since his arrival, Baylor has had 18 of 19 team reach postseason play both years, earning eight Big 12 titles (women's basketball regular season and tournament champions 2016-17 and 2017-18; equestrian, 2016-17; women's indoor track and field, 2017; soccer tournament champions 2018; baseball tournament champions 2018). Additionally, acrobatics and tumbling secured NCATA national championships in both 2017 and 2018, adding to their record four-consecutive titles.

Baylor continued its successful run academically in 2017-18, recording its 20th consecutive semester with 3.0 or better GPA in Spring 2018. Baylor led the Big 12 in Graduation Success Rate (GSR) for the fourth straight year while 108 student-athletes earned degrees in the academic year. Four Baylor athletics programs earned NCAA Division I Academic Performance Program awards for scoring in the Top 10 percent nationally in Academic Progress Rate (APR) in their respective sports (baseball, men's basketball, softball and soccer). Nine of 15 Baylor athletics programs tracked by the NCAA matched or improved upon their APR scores from the previous year and baseball, men's basketball, soccer and softball registered perfect one-year APR scores of 1,000, which leads the Big 12 Conference.

The Bears remain committed to giving back with student-athletes volunteering more than 1,500 hours throughout the Waco community. Baylor's Student-Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC) collected two weeks of food supply for 30 local families during the holiday season. For the 2016-17 school year, a total of 502 coaches, student-athletes, administrators and staff packed a school-record 139,968 meals during the annual Feed My Starving Children initiative.

For the 10th consecutive year, Baylor's Sports Ministry Team traveled to share the love of Christ. Baylor Athletics hosted four international mission trips this year with 60 student-athletes participating in trips to Puerto Rico, Ghana, Mexico and Guatemala.

Rhoades joined the Baylor family from the University of Missouri, where he spent the previous year (2015-16) leading the 20-sport Southeastern Conference intercollegiate athletics department, and he previously served in similar capacities at the University of Houston (2009-15) and the University of Akron (2006-09).

His first year in Columbia saw Mizzou student-athletes register the highest one-semester grade-point in school history at 3.03 for the fall 2015 term; Barry Odom hired as the Tigers' head football coach; wrestler J'den Cox win an NCAA title and earn a berth on the 2016 U.S. Olympic Team; the Tigers' men's swimming and diving team place a program-best eighth at the NCAA Championship and its women's basketball program return to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2006. Bolstered by three top 11 NCAA finishes--wrestling (sixth), men's swimming and diving (eighth) and women's swimming and diving (11th), Missouri finished 43rd in the final 2015-16 Learfield Directors' Cup standings.

Rhoades and his staff developed a student-athlete enrichment program, Mizzou Made: Preparing Champions for Life. This innovative and comprehensive program is part of a campus community partnership focusing on life skills and career development among other core values.

Before moving to Missouri, Rhoades enjoyed five-and-a-half rewarding years guiding the athletic fortunes at the University of Houston as Vice President for Intercollegiate Athletics. He reignited the Cougars' entire program, hiring 14 new head coaches, including 2015 FWAA First-Year Coach of the Year Tom Herman. Rhoades also oversaw a transformation of the student-athlete experience while also directing marked improvements in the areas of academics, facilities, fundraising and athletic success. In nearly every academic measurement, including grade-point average and the NCAA's Academic Progress Rate, Houston registered record achievements. He also unveiled the Cougar Pride Leadership Academy to equip student-athletes with life-long leadership and life skills.

Houston's football team appeared in four bowl games during Rhoades' six seasons, and enjoyed a historic 2011 campaign which saw it climb to No. 6 in the BCS standings en route to a 13-1 record and its first season-ending finish in The Associated Press Top 25 since 1990.

Known as an outstanding fundraiser, Houston raised nearly $100M and constructed $160M in new facilities during his tenure, including a new on-campus football stadium, a men's and women's basketball training center, a golf academy and a short game facility. Rhoades also negotiated one of the nation's top five facility naming rights agreements at the collegiate level and secured a new multi-media rights deal for Houston. Cougar Pride, Houston Athletics' fundraising arm, set an annual donation record for the fifth-consecutive year in 2013-14 as more than 3,100 Cougar Pride members contributed $4.5M to eclipse the previous mark of $3.5M set the previous year.

Rhoades and University of Houston President Dr. Renu Khator successfully steered the institution into an exciting new era when it was invited in December 2011 to join The American Athletic Conference beginning with the 2013-14 academic year. Houston's first year in The American was arguably one of the finest in school history, as its 2013-14 teams combined for 157 victories, 17 American individual championships, 10 NCAA postseason berths and a pair of American team titles. That successful surge led to Houston's highest national finish in the Learfield Directors' Cup since 2000-01.

Rhoades served as chair of the American Athletic Conference Athletics Directors Committee, Athletics Directors Executive Committee and Athletics Directors Finance Committee after having served Conference USA as chairperson for its Championship and Site Selection Committees.

Prior to his arrival at Houston, Rhoades helped the University of Akron achieve unprecedented academic and athletic success. During his tenure, Zip student-athletes earned: 765 total Dean's List honors, 213 All-Conference honors, 83 Academic All-Conference awards, 20 team championships, 14 Conference Player of the Year awards and 12 All-America honors.

Rhoades' Akron tenure was also marked by the construction of a $61.6M on-campus football stadium, the creation of a women's golf program, three-time recognition for the department's diversity strategy and the hiring of 11 head coaches. UA student-athletes also generously gave back the community during Rhoades' tenure providing more than 5,000 service hours to the greater Akron area during each of the 2006-07 and 2007-08 academic years.

He served as a member of the NCAA Division I Championships/Sports Management Cabinet--as well as its Administrative Committee, and led the Mid-American Conference External Affairs Committee. Rhoades also helped then-MAC Commissioner Rick Chryst negotiate an unprecedented TV contract for the league with ESPN.

Rhoades went to Akron after seven years at UTEP, where he worked his way up the department ranks to become the Miners Executive Senior Associate Athletics Director after starting as Assistant Athletics Director for Development. In his final position at UTEP, Rhoades oversaw all fundraising, the marketing and media relations offices as well as football external operations, men's basketball, men's golf, licensing, Miner Athletic Club and the athletics ticket office.

Rhoades, who holds a bachelor's degree in health sciences from the University of Arizona (1993) and a master's of science degree in athletics administration/sports management from Indiana University (2002), began his intercollegiate athletics career as a marketing assistant in the Yale athletic department (1996) and worked in development at Marquette (1997-98) before joining the UTEP staff in 1998.

Mack and his wife, Amy, have three daughters - Nicolette, Natalie and Noelle.

THE BAYLOR LADY BEARS REGIME

2005 NCAA CHAMPIONS

The squad posted a 33-3 record and claimed the Big 12 Conference title with a 14-2 mark. En route to the program's first NCAA Championship, the Lady Bears defeated three No. 1 seeds. Steffanie Blackmon and Sophia Young were both named All-Americans. In addition to earning Big 12 Coach of the Year honors, Mulkey received the New York Athletic Club's prestigious Winged Foot Award.

2012 NCAA CHAMPIONS

The 2011-12 Lady Bear season was as perfect as it could be. En route to claiming its second NCAA Championship in seven years, Baylor ran the table, posting an unprecedented 40-0 mark and claiming both Big 12 Conference crowns. Brittney Griner and Mulkey swept player of the year and coach of the year honors, earning WBCA, USBWA, Associated Press, Naismith and Big 12 Conference recognition. Baylor was ranked No. 1 wire-to-wire in both polls and raced through conference play with a Big 12-record 18-0 mark. Griner and Odyssey Sims were named consensus All-Americans, while Destiny Williams was a WBCA All-America honorable mention honoree.

NCAA TOURNAMENT STAPLE & 8+-YEAR DOMINANCE

- The Lady Bears have made 16 consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances and 18 overall. Those appearances have resulted in two national championships (2005, 2012), three Final Fours (2005, 2010, 2012), five Elite Eights and 13 Sweet Sixteens.
- The Lady Bears are 20-time Big 12 Champions – most in Big 12 history – capturing 10 consecutive regular season titles and 10 tournament titles.
- Baylor is 308-23 (.931) over the past eight seasons while posting a 153-7 (.955) mark in Big 12 play and a 24-1 (.958) in Big 12 Tournament play.
- 266 of Baylor's 308 wins since 2010-11 have been by 10 or more points, and only 14 times in that span has its winning margin been five or fewer points (most recently three, 70-67, at No. 6/8 Texas, Feb. 20, 2017).
- In Baylor's last 463 games, only three opponents (Texas, .516 and .515; Stanford, .509; West Virginia, .500) have shot 50 percent or above.
- Baylor's current streak of holding opponents to .500 or less from the floor is 38 games and the Lady Bears have done so in 74 of the last 75 games.

BIG 12 DYNASTY

- Baylor women's basketball has won a league-leading 20 Big 12 Conference titles, 10 regular season and 10 tournament championships.
- Baylor has run the table in the conference four times (2012, 2013, 2018, 2019). It has only happened six times in Big 12 history (Oklahoma: 16-0 in 2006; Nebraska: 16-0 in 2010).
- Baylor has advanced to the Big 12 Championship game nine seasons in a row and 13 times in program history.
- The Lady Bears have won eight of the last nine Big 12 Championship titles, besting No. 13/19 Iowa State, 67-49, in the 2019 final.

HEAD COACH KIM MULKEY • 19TH SEASON

Success = Kim Mulkey. No matter what she's attempted in basketball, whether it be on the court or along the sideline, Mulkey has found success. In 18-plus seasons as a head coach, she has attained 572 career victories and ranks No. 2 among the winningest active Division I head coaches in winning percentage (.852). She is No. 3 all-time by percentage between two mentors, second-ranked Leon Barmore (.869) and Pat Summitt (.841).

Barmore is the only other coach to reach the 400-win and 500-win milestones quicker than Mulkey. Barmore reached 500 wins in 576 games, while Mulkey accomplished the feat in 594 games as a head coach. It took Barmore 13 seasons and three games to accumulate 400 wins, while Mulkey achieved it in 13 years and 32 games.

When the Women's Basketball Hall of Famer accepted the position as Baylor University's head women's basketball coach on April 4, 2000, few could have predicted the dramatic and prestigious transformation the program was about to undergo. Inheriting a program that was 7-20 in the year prior to her arrival and had registered 13 losing seasons in the 17 previous years, Mulkey has transformed the Lady Bears into a national power. The former Olympic Gold medalist has twice guided the Lady Bear basketball program to the pinnacle of women's basketball, 2005 and 2012 NCAA Championships, 17 NCAA Tournament appearances, 18 20-win seasons, 16 25-win efforts, nine 30-win campaigns and an NCAA record 40 victories and a perfect season in 2011-12. In addition, Mulkey has led the Lady Bears to three Final Four appearances (2005, 2010, 2012) and a record 18 Big 12 Conference titles.

The 2005 NCAA title was Baylor's first for a women's team sport, and just the second in school history overall. In winning the 2005 championship, Mulkey became the first person, man or woman, to win a basketball national championship as a student-athlete, assistant coach and head coach.

En route to the 2005 NCAA Championship, the Lady Bears won their first Big 12 Conference championship and followed with the conference tournament championship for the first of eight title sweeps.

The Lady Bears added to the trophy case with another Big 12 Tournament crown in 2009, claimed both the regular season and tournament crowns in 2011 and captured the regular season title by a record seven games over second place Oklahoma and Texas A&M and went on to earn the tournament crown in 2012. Baylor swept the Big 12 title race, winning both crowns in 2013 to become the first team to win three consecutive conference tournament titles. The Lady Bears continued to be dominant in the league, claiming both regular season and tournament titles in 2014, 2015 and 2016 to total an unprecedented six-straight regular season and six-straight tournament titles. In 2017, Baylor claimed its seventh regular season Big 12 championship in a row and advanced to the tournament title game for the seventh consecutive season before falling in the final. The Lady Bears returned to their seeing ways in 2018, claiming the program's eighth regular season title in a row with a perfect 18-0 mark and the Big 12 Championship title.

Mulkey, a 2000 inductee into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame, came to Baylor from Louisiana Tech where she spent 19 years as either a student-athlete or coach in the legendary Lady Techster program. During her tenure in Ruston, Mulkey was associated with 11 Final Four squads and three national championship teams. She has either played or coached in the national championship game on eight occasions.

Over her 15-year stint as an assistant and associate head coach at her alma mater, Louisiana Tech posted a 430-68 (.864) record and advanced to seven Final Fours. Mulkey held the title of associate head coach for her final four seasons. Her responsibilities at Tech included coordinating recruiting, tutoring Lady Techster guards, overseeing the players' academic progress and running the summer camps. Because of her diligence, no Lady Techster was ever declared academically ineligible.

As a player, Mulkey led the Lady Techsters to a 130-6 (.956) record, two national titles and four Final Fours from 1980-84. During that time the 5-foot-4 playmaker, known for her spectacular passes and French braids, also led Louisiana Tech to its first two national championships (1981 and 1982) and was a part of the USA's Gold medal-winning team at both the 1984 Olympics and the 1983 Pan American Games.

Mulkey averaged 6.38 assists and 1.56 steals per game and currently ranks second on Tech's all-time list in assists and 12th in steals. In addition, the summa cum laude scholar was a two-time Academic All-American as a business major. In recognition of her success in the classroom and on the basketball court, Mulkey was inducted into the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) Academic All-America Hall of Fame in June 2003.

Her athletic career began at an early age. Mulkey, a native of Hammond, La., played Dixie Youth baseball as a 12 year old as well as two years of Pony League baseball and made the all-star team two of the three years. At Hammond High School, she led the basketball team to four-straight state championships, posted a 136-5 record and finished her career with a then-national record 4,075 points. She earned all-district, all-state and All-America honors each of her four years at Hammond High. She also graduated as her class' valedictorian with a perfect 4.0 grade point average. Mulkey has a street named after her in her hometown of Tickfaw, La.

Mulkey is a member of the National High School Hall of Fame, the Louisiana High School Hall of Fame, Louisiana Sports Hall of Fame and Louisiana Tech Athletics Hall of Fame. In 1999, she was the lone female named among the Louisiana Sports Writers top 25 athletes of the 20th century and was listed by Sports Illustrated as one of the top 50 sports figures of Louisiana for the 20th century. In June of 2000, she was inducted into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame located in Knoxville, Tenn. Additionally, Mulkey was inducted into the Baylor Athletics Hall of Fame in 2007 and entered the Texas Sports Hall of Fame in 2010. Born May 17, 1962, in Santa Ana, Calif., Mulkey has two children, daughter Makenzie (27) and son Kramer (24).

Makenzie (Robertson) Fuller serves as associate director of basketball operations for the Lady Bears. She was a four-year letterwinner on Baylor's basketball team, and during her career the Lady Bears posted an impressive 140-10 record, which included eight Big 12 crowns and an NCAA national championship (2012).

Fuller, a three-time Academic All-Big 12 honoree, was named to both Baylor's Dean's List and the Big 12 Commissioner's Honor Roll numerous times. She earned both a bachelor and master's degree from Baylor and married former Baylor football and professional baseball player Clay Fuller in 2015, the couple had their first son Oct. 12, 2018 (Kannon Reid).

Kramer attended LSU, where he played for the highly touted Tiger baseball team. He was a first team All-SEC shortstop and second team Louisville Slugger All-American in 2016, and garnered third team Collegiate Baseball All-American, honorable mention Perfect Game All-American and second team All-SEC accolades in 2017. After leading LSU back to the College World Series in 2017, which resulted in a runner-up finish, Kramer was selected in the fourth round of the MLB Draft by the St. Louis Cardinals. He plays shortstop for the Palm Beach Cardinals, the club's High-A affiliate.

Mulkey's autobiography, "Won't Back Down" with Peter May, a retired Boston Globe senior sportswriter, appeared in bookstores Nov. 5, 2007, and the paperback edition became available Sept. 8, 2008.

BAYLOR'S NCAA CHAMPIONSHIPS

2005 NCAA CHAMPIONS

The squad posted a 33-3 record and claimed the Big 12 Conference title with a 14-2 mark. En route to the program's first NCAA Championship, the Lady Bears defeated three No. 1 seeds. Steffanie Blackmon and Sophia Young were both named All-Americans. In addition to earning Big 12 Coach of the Year honors, Mulkey received the New York Athletic Club's prestigious Winged Foot Award.

2012 NCAA CHAMPIONS

The 2011-12 Lady Bear season was as perfect as it could be. En route to claiming its second NCAA Championship in seven years, Baylor ran the table, posting an unprecedented 40-0 mark and claiming both Big 12 Conference crowns. Brittney Griner and Mulkey swept player of the year and coach of the year honors, earning WBCA, USBWA, Associated Press, Naismith and Big 12 Conference recognition. Baylor was ranked No. 1 wire-to-wire in both polls and raced through conference play with a Big 12-record 18-0 mark. Griner and Odyssey Sims were named consensus All-Americans, while Destiny Williams was a WBCA All-America honorable mention honoree.

I-35 welcome center, basketball arena included in $1.1 billion Baylor fundraising plan

Waco Tribune-Herald By: Phillip Ericksen November 1, 2018

Baylor University is starting a $1.1 billion fundraising campaign intended to extend the campus footprint, add athletic infrastructure and elevate the university's academic profile.

Known as "Give Light: The Campaign for Baylor," the plan calls for $500 million in new endowed funds, $300 million for capital projects and another $300 million in general funds. One of the most visible aspects will be a new visitor center at the corner of Interstate 35 and University Parks Drive, the former site of the Ivy Square shopping center.

Baylor administrators are also setting the table for a new basketball facility to replace the Ferrell Center. The new facility would have 6,500 to 7,000 seats, Vice President for Advancement David Rosselli said. That represents about a 3,000 seat decrease from the Ferrell Center, which has hosted basketball games since 1988.

The visitor center will be known as the Mark and Paula Hurd Welcome Center. Officials say the building, named after Baylor regent and Oracle Corp. CEO Mark Hurd and his wife, Paula, will be a 50,000- to 60,000-square-foot complex meant to attract prospective students, parents, visitors and anyone else traversing I-35.

"In my estimation, it'll be the new hub of campus," Rosselli said.

The university did not announce the value of the donation from the Hurds, who were the lead donors of Baylor's outdoor tennis facility.

"As they have on many occasions, Mark and Paula have stepped forward as champions of excellence and as shining lights for the vital role Baylor plays in higher education as a Christian research university," Baylor President Linda Livingstone wrote in a statement.

The $500 million in endowed funds would lead to a slew of endowed chairs and professorships. Last week, the university announced Mark and Jennifer McCollum gave $3.5 million for an endowed chair of data sciences in Baylor's school of engineering and computer science. That is part of an $11.5 million commitment from the McCollums, and Mark McCollum is also a regent.

Such gifts are part of Livingstone's "Illuminate" academic plan to effectively double Baylor's $1.3

billion endowment, expand graduate and doctoral programs and increase research spending. The goal is to reach tier-one status, as defined by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, which indicates the top level of research universities and a source of local economic growth. Officials have said Baylor could reach that goal in a decade.

A rendering of the welcome center shows a multi-story facility with outdoor seating and a sign along University Parks Drive. A groundbreaking date has not been set, Baylor spokesman Jason Cook said. The next steps include planning and architectural work.

More elements could sit adjacent to the welcome center. Officials have discussed a boutique hotel, a grocery store and a spirit shop as possible additions. Rosselli said Baylor is about a year away from deciding what to place there.

The campaign includes improvements to the Tidwell Bible Building, which mostly holds religion and history courses and faculty offices, and space for students, faculty and staff of the honors college.

As for the athletics department, the football program is slated to have its own facility built near the practice field. Enhancements to the Simpson Athletics and Academic Center will be made for the non-football sports.

More than $541 million of the $1.1 billion plan, including $346 million in pledges, has already been raised. Rosselli said.

"That is a significant number toward our overall goal," Rosselli said. "The Baylor family has been extremely resilient and faithful through some difficult, challenging years, as you know. But to be at that number, given where the institution has been over the last several years, is remarkable."

Big 12 WBB: Baylor's Kim Mulkey welcomes grandson

Dallas Morning News By: Alexa Phillippou October 16, 2018

Just as the Baylor women's basketball program underwent a lot of change this offseason, so too did its leader of 19 years, Kim Mulkey.

Mulkey had spinal fusion surgery in mid-August to treat pain she was experiencing in her neck, shoulder and arm. And then just last week, she welcomed her first grandson.

Mulkey's daughter, Makenzie Fuller, a former basketball player at Baylor who has previously worked for her mother's staff, gave birth to a baby boy, Kannon Reid, Friday evening.

It was an especially emotional moment for Mulkey and her family, as Fuller and her husband, Clay, a former Baylor football player, lost their unborn daughter last November due to two life-threatening birth defects.

"We've had a rough year, losing Scout, their firstborn, and then them getting pregnant quickly, you were nervous," Mulkey said. "You're already nervous when you don't have the death of a child... I think the emotion was hidden in all of us because we're all just nervous until you actually bring him into this world."

Past stars on hand for ASU-Baylor game, focus on youth

Navajo Times By: Quentin Jodie October 18, 2018

FORT DEFIANCE

"Da da da, da da da."

That classic ESPN jingle comes to mind for Ryneldi Becenti as the national televised women's basketball game between national powers Arizona State University and Baylor is drawing near.

The ASU Lady Sun Devils will host the Baylor Lady Bears on Nov. 11 at the Window Rock Events Center, which has been dubbed "Showdown on the Rez." Tipoff is scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Tickets for the marquee matchup are $5 and they can be purchased at Window Rock High School.

"As kids we always heard that (jingle) and now it's coming here," Becenti said during Monday's news conference at the state-of-the-art facility in Fort Defiance. "Growing up as little kids all of us had a vision, which was to get out there and show our talent. It's just an honor that it's coming here to my hometown."

On Nov. 11, Rainy Crisp, Michelle Tom, Kalene Carl, RaeAnn West and Becenti will be honored for laying the groundwork for others to pursue basketball at the collegiate level.

More specifically, ASU women's basketball coach Charli Turner Thorne said the game next month will tie in two things: rezbball and honoring veterans.

"We are meshing the passion and the love of rezbball here on the reservation," she said. "We want to talk about these young women's stories in what basketball has meant to them and how it impacted them.

"We also want to celebrate and hold a tribute to our troops," she said. "We are honoring the present and the past but we want to emphasize our Vietnam veterans. Like all Vietnam veterans they were disenfranchised and they did not get a proper welcome home. Our goal and attention on Nov. 11 is to give them a proper welcome home."

Since becoming head basketball coach 19 years ago, Thorne said she's done a lot of events to promote the women's game. With the help of women's basketball operations director Ryan Cohen, they hosted the first outdoor basketball game at Chase Fields during the 2000-01 season against Tennessee.

"We did two of those actually," she said. "We are trying to grow the game of women's basketball and we're hoping to tell these stories."

Thorne said when she first pitched the idea of playing at the Events Center, Baylor women's head coach Kim Mulkey was quickly on board.

"Games like this are a little dicey," she said. "There is a lot of logistics going on and you know it's not convenient as taking a flight to Phoenix and things like that. But Kim did not hesitate. She was interested the second I talked about it."

Thorne said landing the ESPN deal took one phone call. She contacted Carol Stiff, vice president of Women Sports Programming, and with the countless storylines, the network agreed to televise the event.

"I'll be totally transparent - women's basketball as great as it is, it doesn't always sell itself," Thorne said. "They do want stories. They do want the stories to draw in a bigger audiences so (Stiff) she was interested right away."

Thorne said the storylines to be told are quite remarkable, such as Tom finishing up her residence to become a doctor at the Winslow Indian Health Care Center.

Crisp, who last played for Turner in 2004, has spent most of her adult life going back to her high school alma mater, teaching the game to a new bunch of youngsters.

Becenti and West have followed the same footsteps with Becenti being one of the pioneers of the sport.

"When I teach kids I am there to inspire them," Becenti said. "There are a lot of talented women out there and we just want them to keep going."

West, who flew in from Miami, said it was good to come home but she offered a glaring perspective in how she sees today's athletes.

"A lot of the kids around here will never leave here to watch a (collegiate) game," West said. "They won't go to Albuquerque or Phoenix to watch a game so to have this game is huge. It's going to inspire a lot of kids around here because that is what they need, it's going to be in our backyard."

Ionescu and Durr headline AP preseason All-American team

Associated Press By: Doug Feinberg November 1, 2018

NEW YORK (AP) — Sabrina Ionescu has already broken records at Oregon and she's only starting her junior year.

BAYLOR NEWS CLIPS

The NCAA career leader for triple-doubles headlines The Associated Press women's basketball preseason All-America team.

Ionescu, who has 10 triple doubles in her young career, received 29 votes Thursday from the 31-member national media panel that selects the AP Top 25 each week.

"She's a great competitor who brings it each and every day," Oregon coach Kelly Graves said. "She's very consistent in her effort, has a high basketball IQ and obviously her skills speak for themselves. She can pass it, she can shoot it, she can handle it. There's nothing she really can't do on a basketball court. She'll give us whatever the team needs in that specific game. ... She's a special player that doesn't come along very often."

Ionescu, who averaged 19.7 points, 7.8 assists and 6.7 rebounds last season, is joined on the team by Louisville's Asia Durr, UConn's Katie Lou Samuelson, Notre Dame's Arike Ogunbowale and Baylor's Kalani Brown.

Durr is one of the most dynamic scorers in college basketball and the senior has been a huge part of the reason Louisville has been successful the past few years. She averaged 18.7 points last season to get the Cardinals to the Final Four.

"She just loves to be in the gym. Skill-wise continued to develop her game offensively. She's not just a 3-point shooter, she can shoot the pullup. She gets to the rim. Able to score in all 3 phases. Also sees the court extremely well," Louisville coach Jeff Walz said. "She's a gifted passer. She's come a long as we've really just worked on all aspects of her game. She came in more as a scorer and now I think she's developed a really good all-around basketball game."

It's the second straight season that Samuelson is a preseason All-American. UConn's leader averaged 17.4 points last season and shot 53 percent from the field and nearly 48 percent on 3-point attempts.

"She's been an All-American two years in a row, watching her the last couple weeks she's healthier and improved in so many ways over the last two seasons and we're going to need her to be all that unlike her freshman, sophomore and junior year," UConn coach Geno Auriemma said. "She has less experience around her and we are going to need her to do more. I don't only expect her to be an All-American again, I expect her to be the best player in the country."

Ogunbowale may be the most well-known member of the team after hitting historic game-winning shots in both the semifinals and finals of the NCAA Tournament last season to lead Notre Dame to the title. She averaged 20.8 points and 5.4 rebounds for the Irish as a junior last year.

"I think the biggest jump in Arike's game this summer has been in her leadership," Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw said. "She's done a tremendous job with the freshmen. She's encouraging, she's really leading. She's always led by example, now she's doing it vocally."

Ogunbowale helped the Irish earn the No. 1 ranking in the AP's preseason poll.

Brown has been one of the most dominant centers in the country, leading Baylor with 20 points and 10.5 rebounds last year. The 6-foot-7 star has had a mid-range jumper and now says she can even shoot the 3.

Ionescu, Durr and Samuelson were first-team All-Americans last spring, with Brown and Ogunbowale making the second team.

The AP started choosing a preseason All-America team before the 1994-95 season.

The Associated Press 2018-19 preseason All-America women's basketball team, with school, height, year and votes from a 31-member national media panel (key 2017-18 statistics in parentheses):

- Asia Durr, Louisville, 5-10, senior, 29 votes (18.7 ppg, 3.1 rpg, 2.3 apg, 41.5 3pt fg pct, 84.8 ft pct, 1.0 steals)
- Sabrina Ionescu, Oregon, 5-11, junior, 29 (19.7 ppg, 6.7 rpg, 7.8 apg, 43.8 3pt fg pct, 80.5 ft pct, 1.7 steals, 35.6 minutes)
- Katie Lou Samuelson, UConn, 6-3, senior, 28 (17.4 ppg, 4.5 rpg, 3.8 apg, 53.0 fg pct, 47.5 3pt fg pct, 83.5 ft pct, 1.2 steals)
- Arike Ogunbowale, Notre Dame, 5-8, senior, 24 (20.8 ppg, 5.4 rpg, 2.8 apg, 1.4 steals)
- Kalani Brown, Baylor, 6-7, senior, 18 (20.0 ppg, 10.5 rpg, 64.2 fg pct, 1.5 blocks)

Others receiving votes: Teaira McCowan, Mississippi State, 12; Megan Gustafson, Iowa, 10; Napheesa Collier, UConn, 4; Chennedy Carter, Texas A&M, 1.

Women's basketball: McCowan, Brown and Gustafson remain hidden jewels in today's game

Associated Press By: David Brandt November 3, 2018

STARKVILLE, Miss. — A broad smile creeps across Mississippi State coach Vic Schaefer's face when he talks about having one more season with his "Aircraft Carrier."

It's one of his affectionate nicknames for 6-foot-7 senior Teaira McCowan. She is part of a trifecta of players who represent a rarity in basketball, whether in the NBA or the men's and women's college games: A traditional center that can dominate a game playing with their back to the basket.

Baylor's Kalani Brown and Iowa's Megan Gustafson round out the trio.

McCowan's imposing height and wingspan helped carry the Bulldogs to back-to-back appearances in the NCAA Tournament national championship game the past two seasons. She was an All-American last year after averaging 18.2 points, 13.9 rebounds and more than two blocks a contest.

"You put her on the low block, there's not anyone better in the country," Schaefer said. "I think for us and what we do offensively, she's an absolutely perfect fit."

The sport is moving toward versatile post players who have perimeter skills that include shooting 3-pointers. McCowan, Brown and Gustafson are showing there is still a place in the game for old-school centers.

"It's a luxury," Iowa coach Lisa Bluder said. "There's just not very many of them anymore."

And it's not a coincidence that the Bears, Bulldogs and Hawkeyes enter the season with high expectations. Baylor is ranked No. 4 in the preseason rankings while Mississippi State is No. 6 and Iowa is No. 13.

Schaefer and Bluder say there are many reasons why traditional centers aren't very prevalent anymore.

They say it's simply hard to find a good 6-6 athlete who enjoys physical contact and will put in the time to learn the footwork and technical skills needed to play on the block.

"Sometimes it's slow and tedious," Schaefer said. "Teaira played 10 minutes a game her freshman year, then as a sophomore she's sixth player of the year."

Her third year, she goes from not being on the All-SEC team to being an All-American.

"That doesn't happen often. She bypassed a lot of steps between her sophomore and junior years."

McCowan said being so tall comes with challenges that guards might not have. Once she figured things out, the payoff was huge.

"I think me just getting comfortable in my own body helped," McCowan said. "Then it was just listening to my coaches, them giving me moves and information on what to do and it made things come along."

Brown and Gustafson have had career trajectories that look a lot like McCowan's. The 6-7 Brown went from starting just one game her freshman year to averaging 20.1 points and 10.2 rebounds while shooting 65 percent from the field as a junior.

Brown said she understands the appeal of having tall players become more versatile and play on the perimeter, but there's a fine line where suddenly posts aren't using their strengths.

The trio of McCowan, Brown and Gustafson certainly stick to what works. The three have combined for 3,042 shots in their careers and have just one 3-point attempt between them.

"There's not many of us," Brown said. "Sixth, seventh, eighth graders — I see a lot of (younger) big girls dribbling early or even dunking. But I still think we should do what we do best."

Gustafson went from averaging 10.7 points during her freshman year to 25.2 points, 12.8 rebounds and more than two blocks per game last season as a junior. At 6-foot-3, she doesn't have the same imposing height of McCowan and Brown, but uses quickness to dominate in the Big Ten.

"I love playing against girls who are as tall or taller than me, so I can really use my agility and speed," Gustafson said.

Gustafson said she's worked on adding an outside shot, but like the others, she knows "what my strengths are." One of those includes adding a hook shot to her game, which she learned partially by watching old videos of former NBA great Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Bluder said it's that kind of dedication to perfecting her craft that makes Gustafson so valuable. In a game that's moving toward inside-outside post players, the coach said there will always be room on the floor for a true center.

"When you find one," Bluder said. "It's a hidden jewel."

The best centers in women's college hoops are fighting against the evolution of the game

The Athletic
By: Howard Megdal November 5, 2018

Kalani Brown is 6-foot-7. The Baylor senior center has the size and the strength to muscle through virtually any defense thrown her way. But her bright smile darkens as she considers the swarms she so often faces from opponents without a true center, which is virtually everyone these days.

"You know, you're about to make this awesome move and you already got it in your head and all of a sudden a guard comes to whack it away," Brown says, disdainfully. "It's like, 'Come on now. Y'all just stay out there.'"

But Brown and other centers around the country understand that those barriers have broken down. The age where guards were guards, playmaking and shooting from the perimeter, and centers stationed themselves around the basket — well, that kind of basketball has largely disappeared.

At the collegiate level, the past few champions have played without a traditional five. Defending national champion Notre Dame utilized Jessica Shepard, a 6-foot-4 forward capable of passing in transition and shooting it from anywhere. At the behest of her coach, Dawn Staley, A'ja Wilson patterned her game after Candace Parker, en route to taking South Carolina to the 2017 national title. And the four title winners before that, a series of Connecticut squads, ran through opponents thanks to Breanna Stewart, the ultimate inside-outside hybrid at 6-5.

Yet two of the nation's most serious contenders this season will be relying on their bigs to a huge extent. And both Brown at Baylor and 6-foot-7 Teaira McCowan at Mississippi State will draw the attention of opposing defenses, along with the basketball ops departments of those WNBA teams selecting early on in the 2019 draft. Interestingly, the two centers are taking vastly different approaches to developing their games, reflecting not only their strengths but also what they believe they can do best at the next level.

Brown, who had already expanded her shot out to midrange last season, says she has added the pull-up transition 3, and even has the support of her coach, Kim Mulkey, to take it. Considering that Brown is coming off of a junior season in which she ranked sixth in Division I (minimum 200 possessions) in points per possession, at 1.209, per Synergy, this added efficiency is a frightening prospect for opponents. Brown understands that this will only help

Baylor's spacing, but she also sees where the game itself is headed. "Watching a lot of big girls at the next level, I noticed they're picking and popping more, being more versatile," Brown says. "So, I'm trying to do that."

It's a balancing act, though: Mulkey's top imperative to Brown was to improve her rebounding. Despite her stature, she ranked just 102nd in the country in overall rebounding percentage, per HerHoopStats, and her defense was solid, but not elite, 387th in the country (minimum 200 possessions) in defensive points per possession, according to Synergy.

"I've just got to come out of my comfort zone a little bit," Brown says. "Coach made that clear. She said I need to be more of a rebounder. So, I'm just trying to do what coach says, because I know she knows best for me. I'm an All-American because of her."

For McCowan, however, the emphasis is on continuing to do what she does best — block shots, grab rebounds and finish around the rim. She already does that at an elite level, ranking third in the nation in rebounding percentage, on the strength she shows at both ends — she's top 10 in both offensive and defensive rebounding.

"Most bigs want to be guards, and a big doesn't want to be an actual big and get back to the basket," McCowan says. "I don't really care about stepping out, shooting. I mean, I can, but if I can get you in the hole, I know that's where I'm best at. And bigs don't understand, do what you're best at first and then work your way out."

McCowan says she was working on passing out of the double teams she's going to face even more this season, now that teammates like Victoria Vivians, Morgan William and Blair Schaefer have moved on. It's a vital skill she needs to add—her assist percentage of 3.0 last season ranked 3,251 among 3,391 Division I players.

But Schaefer doesn't necessarily want her star passing when she gets the ball on the low block, even when the double team comes.

"I want her to be selfish," Schaefer says. "She's really unselfish sometimes and I'm like, 'Look T, you need to find a way to finish that.' At the next level, they're not going to double her. They're just going to have somebody big, strong, physical, beating on her. So, the fact that she's as strong and physical as she is right now, I think, will really prepare her."

How prepared the two bigs will be for the WNBA when, as one league talent evaluator put it, "the microscope becomes a little more focused their senior year", has much to do with what the draft will look like. Teams such as the New York Liberty and the Indiana Fever will pick in the lottery, and neither one has an obvious, long-term answer at center.

Several league talent evaluators say the biggest key for McCowan's draft stock will be watching how well she chases more mobile centers around the court at the defensive end, while Brown's biggest keys will be turning her tools into skills on the boards and, simply, how often she runs at full speed in transition.

As another evaluator who isn't high on the two centers put it: "Neither one could have kept up with the pace in the finals last year."

But they both have a year to show teams they can play in a league where pace is now a requirement. Brown, for her part, is patterning some of her game after Sylvia Fowles, a traditional five, but also cited Liz Cambage's 2018 campaign as a model for how a center her size combines the old school duties of a post with the new imperatives of the WNBA pace.

"I think I should have it at least under my belt, just in case I need to pull it out," Brown says. "I mean, we still do what we do best, which is dominate the paint. I just take different things from different player's games and try to make mine better."

And as the game shifts to ever-smaller lineups, McCowan sees the shift as an opportunity for her, rather than a paradigm change that will make her obsolete.

"I'm just like, OK. You'll get me on offense, but on defense I mean, I'm going to get you," McCowan says with a smile. "I'm going to score. Point blank, period. I'm going to score."

Jackson ready to take on point guard role as No. 4 Lady Bears open season

Waco Tribune-Herald By: Krista Pirtle November 5, 2018

Sitting to the right of Kim Mulkey inside the media room of the Ferrell Center, Chloe Jackson smiled.

The all-SEC performer and one of the 20-member watch list for the Ann Meyers Drysdale Award (which recognizes the nation's top shooting guard in women's college basketball) has been working to play a new position for her new team, the fourth-ranked Baylor Lady Bears.

Known for her shooting, she averaged 18.1 points per game at LSU last season, Jackson is being groomed to become the next point guard for Baylor. And who better to learn from than Kim Mulkey, who played point guard herself as she won two national titles as a player at Louisiana Tech (1981, 1982) and an Olympic gold medal in 1984. In fact, if the Lady Bears win their season home opener (13-0 under Mulkey), it will be the 19th-year Baylor head coach's 1,100th win combined as a player, assistant and head coach.

So when the question was asked if she knew coming in how demanding Mulkey is on point guards, that smile spread across Jackson's face as she took no time to answer.

"Yes."

But throughout the first two exhibition games over the past two weeks, Jackson showed just how much she's learned from Mulkey during her short time in Waco.

"I'm being more vocal, for one," Jackson said. "I'm not used to having to talk so much on the court. Like (Mulkey) says, the point guard is like the quarterback of the team. Being more vocal and instructing, leading, you have to do all that."

For those outside the program, Jackson's move to point guard might seem like making up for the loss of Alexis Morris who was dismissed from the team back in September. According to Mulkey, though, the plan to put Jackson at point came when Morris was still on the team.

"She knew then that I wanted her to play the point guard," Mulkey said. "I think her best chance to play pro ball isn't necessarily at the off guard. I think it's with the ball in her hands. She's an all-SEC performer. She scored 18 points a game. I don't want to take that away from her. At the point guard, you have to think the game and it never goes away. It's something that I've got to every day keep hounding her and never let up because if she can catch on quickly and can handle it, we can be a better basketball team."

The point guard position isn't like every other position on the floor. The point guard must know every play, but not just what they're supposed to do. Instead, the point has to know how every cog moves in every scheme, in every play. The point guard has to know when to penetrate and kick to her open teammate when the defense helps. She also has to know when to pull the trigger herself.

And all of that is just on the offensive side of the floor. She makes sure everyone is in the correct defense. When the team huddles up during free throws, she's telling them the defense to get in or what offense they'll run on the other end of the floor.

She is the quarterback on the floor, as Mulkey describes it. She's an extension of the coach on the floor. If an audible, if you will, needs to be called, she makes that call. Communication is huge in basketball, so making sure every one of her teammates is on the same page is important and yet another responsibility of the point guard.

"The point guard position is the most difficult. It just is," Mulkey said. "She is responsible for everybody on that floor. She has to know the position, where they're supposed to be. She has to make the calls offensively, defensively. Free throws she looks at me, makes the calls."

All of this is different from shooting guard, Jackson's usual position. There, she makes sure she's doing her job, going where she needs to go in each offensive set. The off guard listens to the plays being called by the point guard and does them. She isn't responsible for bringing the ball up the court and getting the offense to run smoothly.

"It's new, obviously, but it's exciting," Jackson said. "I do what I need to do when she recruited me, where I needed to play and where she wanted me to play. I just knew it was going to be something to get used to, but I knew I needed to take it on and take the challenge."

One of the biggest changes Jackson has made has been becoming more vocal. She can no longer get a teammate and talk to her one-on-one when she can. If there's a correction needed to be made, the communication is instant.

"The (transition) has been intense because (Mulkey) is intense," Jackson said. "It's been good, I mean, I'm getting it each and every day just learning the plays and everybody's strengths and weaknesses also."

Jackson showed that in the first two exhibitions. After she had four assists and four turnovers in the first contest against Langston, she had seven assists and zero turnovers against Texas A&M-Commerce. In the first game, she was 6-for-8 from the floor as she can be deadly from midrange.

But the things that don't show up on the stat sheet provided even more evidence that Jackson is learning and will play the position well for the Lady Bears.

Her court vision was spot on. She made the correct reads and got the ball to her teammates in situations that they would succeed in. Jackson got her teammates better looks at the basket by driving to the basket.

"Chloe is so involved with learning in practice that some things she did in the game the other night instinctively let me know we're going to be OK," Mulkey said. "She pushes the ball up the floor. She can penetrate and get her teammates easier shots."

Bear notes

Baylor's season opener is Type 1 Diabetes Awareness Day. Lauren Cox was diagnosed with T1D when she was seven. Cox, along with the local chapter of JDRF (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) will be involved with pregame and postgame festivities for the game.

Kim Mulkey played with Nicholls State head coach Dobe Plaisance.

"I played summer basketball, AAU basketball with Dobe," Mulkey said. "I know her very well. I spoke to her team this morning. She asked me to speak to them at practice. She's excited to be here. She loves the game, her team they work hard for her. Her daughter played at LSU. Her son, plays at UNO. Dobe and I go back a long way."

Philly College Sports By: Jack Scheuer November 28, 2018

It seems like it was just a few years ago that if an offensive player was 6-9 or taller, he was told to stay close to the hoop and don't go wandering anywhere. If he did stray a little, there would be coaches yelling "get inside." Those days are obviously over, and the emergence of big men shooting from the outside has made a big change in the game. All over the country the Bigs are getting up shots, and not just from 15 – 18 feet, but frequently from 3-point land. For instance, Jamorko Pickett, at Georgetown, a 6-10 soph, is 9 for 18 from 3; John Mooney, a 6-9 Notre Dame senior, is 7 for 14; Xavier senior, 6-9 Ryan Welage, has made 12 of 34, and on and on it goes. Locally, Saint Joseph's 6-9 soph Taylor Funk, has nailed 16 for 34 from beyond the arc, and is very likely the best pure shooter in the city.

It's a new game out there hoop fans, so sit back and enjoy yourselves.

At this early part of the season, the best player in the area has been Saint Joseph's Charlie Brown Jr., the 6-7 junior from Philadelphia's George Washington

H.S. who missed all of last season with an injury. He is putting up 25 points a game while shooting 59% from the field, and has made 21 of 37, (57%) on 3- pointers. His dad, Charlie Sr., played on Overbrook's 34-0 team in the late 70's.

Our highly-regarded research department has come up with not one, but five of the most unique names in college basketball, and, hard to believe, they all play for the same team. On the Baylor women's squad are: Queen Egbo, Moon Ursin, Trinity Oliver, Honesty Scott-Grayson, and Juicy Landrum. Juicy wins Name of the Year.

We got now: A roundtable with women's basketball's future game changers

The Undefeated By: Sean Hurd November 30, 2018

When Notre Dame shooting guard Arike Ogunbowale electrified the nation with her game-winning heroics in the semifinals and championship game of last year's Final Four, possibly the best Final Four in women's basketball history, it created a moment for the entire sport.

Each one of Ogunbowale's shots permeated the mainstream sports news cycle, even yielding Twitter reactions from the likes of Skylar Diggins-Smith, Dwyane Wade, Swin Cash and Kobe Bryant — whose recognition of Ogunbowale went viral.

Ogunbowale's buzzer-beating 3-pointer to win the national championship over Mississippi State is a moment that sports fans everywhere dreamed of when they were kids hooping in their backyards. In that moment, everyone wanted to be like Arike.

Ogunbowale's shot was then amplified by an ensuing WNBA season that many have called one of its best and garnered record viewership.

Evidence of the game's athletic evolution is apparent with the beginning of each basketball season. Players have become faster and more athletic, and the game is moving toward a position-less state. Female hoopers could always ball, and now more people have decided to take notice.

The Undefeated spoke separately to some of the best players in collegiate women's basketball about the state of the game, the pay dispute in the WNBA and what they would say to those who criticize the sport.

Did you watch the WNBA growing up?

Arike Ogunbowale, 5-foot-8 senior guard, Notre Dame: I didn't really see it on TV a lot. Whenever I turned on the TV, it was usually men's basketball, so that's what I watched.

Chennedy Carter, 5-foot-7 sophomore guard, Texas A&M: Of course. I watched it knowing that my cousin played in the WNBA. Jia Perkins played alongside Maya Moore.

Teaira McCowan, 6-foot-7 senior center, Mississippi State: I really didn't know what basketball was until the eighth grade. I wasn't really into sports.

Asia Durr, 5-foot-10 senior guard, Louisville: I did. I didn't have lot of downtime growing up. When I could, I did. This past year I definitely watched, especially with the [Seattle] Storm playing Phoenix. That whole series was just crazy.

Kalani Brown, 6-foot-7 senior center, Baylor: Growing up, I followed Sylvia Fowles a lot as a kid. My mom would turn her on back when she was at LSU, and I followed her throughout her career in the WNBA. I basically learned to base my game around her.

How would you describe the state of women's basketball?

Ogunbowale: I think it's growing. I think we have a lot of players that have a lot of similar moves to men — getting more athletic, getting more shifty with the ball — so it's definitely elevating and growing day by day.

Carter: I feel like it's underrated and women deserve more credit, especially for those who play at the professional level, for what they do. I think they deserve as much credit as the men get.

McCowan: I think we're a pretty successful organization as a whole. I think what we're doing is good for all.

Durr: I think it continues to grow. Post players continue to get taller and taller. You see so many players who start to play like guys. People are doing a great job with marketing, Final Four games, big-time games between top-five teams. They're also doing a great job of marketing great players. Most importantly, as a female sport, you hear people say all the time females don't get enough credit in sport, it's always males. It's a good thing to see that changing.

Brown: I think that we're starting to speak up for ourselves. In a way, I think we're finally demanding our respect. It turns a lot of heads that a lot of players are opening up about it, which hasn't happened in the last 20 years.

Between the excitement of last year's Final Four and WNBA season, there's been increased visibility on the game. Would you agree?

Carter: Just by Arike hitting that shot, that helped us. That put her, her school and women's basketball on the stage. I believe the Final Four had two overtime games. So I mean it's evolving, it's becoming better. Players are great — not only good, but great players all around the country.

Ogunbowale: I think people will tune in more if they see it on TV. We have a lot of great athletes, and it's superexciting to watch, but we just need a bigger platform to show the games, and that will definitely create a bigger fan base.

McCowan: I think that college is really producing some good, successful players to get up into the next league. As we're getting better, women's basketball is growing as a whole. I think we're doing good things, getting younger children to see that this can be an outlet for us.

Durr: The way it's growing, it's a neat thing to see. I hear a whole lot of guys talk about, 'She can't beat me, she can't hoop,' but you see these girls out here playing like guys and sometimes better. I love to play, but I love to be a fan of the game too.

What do you say to those who still criticize women's basketball?

Brown: Most people who criticize women's basketball don't know anything about it, haven't watched a game, and they're just kind of ignorant. We have the respect from the guys' side because they know the game and they watch the game. Some of them have even said they've taken certain things from women's basketball. Women's basketball has always been there, you just have to watch it.

Carter: Keep your opinions to yourself. That's what I would say.

Ogunbowale: It's really not even people who play basketball, it's just random trolls who don't really know anything. We're respected by the people who we need to be respected by. We don't need to prove anything to them.

McCowan: I think that they should just sit back and mind their business but, at the same time, appreciate what we do. Nothing is given to us easy. In the WNBA, we actually have to do two seasons. We work year-round. It's not easy. For them to criticize and say what we do isn't important, it's a slap in the face.

Durr: Just give the game a chance. Even if you do and you don't really care for it, then that's fine. It's the guys who never gave it a chance who criticize us of our sex. 'Go stay in the kitchen. You should be cooking.' You work so hard, make so many sacrifices, and to be told that — people have told me that before — it's very disheartening. You've just got to continue to play your game. Nobody will take my love of the game away.

What are your thoughts on the pay dispute happening in the WNBA?

Brown: To have the league for 20 years and not see it change in paychecks, I think that's ridiculous. There's a lot of great players who have come through the league and haven't seen a change — I think that's crazy. I support it. My dad [P.J. Brown] went through it in the '90s. He went almost two years and didn't get paid. He said it's not going to change until we make a massive move. He said this is going to be our massive move, the strike that is coming. I support it. I don't even think it's about basketball anymore; I think it's about gender equality.

Ogunbowale: Like everyone says, they deserve to get paid more. They're great players and top-notch athletes in the nation, so they definitely deserve more respect than they're given.

Carter: I'm a firm believer of women should get paid more [than they currently are]. I believe that because they are professionals, doing the same thing that the men are doing. These women have to live off what they're making. Most players I talk to, I talked to my cousin [Jia Perkins], she went overseas to make most of her money. I love traveling, but I love being in my country. I want to be able to go to New York and play and make the same money I would overseas.

McCowan: At some point they're going to have to understand that we do a lot and we're actually doing more than we have to. For the love of the game, what we want to see and how we want to see the game evolve, we just have to keep fighting.

Durr: I've never experienced playing in the WNBA to then go play overseas. I can only imagine how tired they get. They're playing nine or 10 months out of the year, you think about all the wear and tear on their bodies. They want to be able to play for 15-plus years, but it's hard when you're playing year-round. You don't have time to rest. That's what they're trying to say as well. On top of they should get paid more, it's for how much they do.

What is the biggest misconception about women's basketball?

Ogunbowale: That it's not interesting to watch. People go out there and give their hearts just like any other sport. It's superphysical. It needs more respect.

Durr: Just because we can't dunk, people think we can't play. If you think about it, basketball is not about dunking. If you take away guys being able to dunk, then that really exposes how they can play. You really have to think the game. If you actually know the game, then you would respect both sides.

Brown: The fact that we don't dunk. Our game is slower and more fundamental, and people want to see girls dunk. That's coming with my wave too. The other day I saw an eighth-grader get up and dunk.

BAYLOR NEWS CLIPS

We're bringing it, it just takes us time. But at the same time, it's not like it's not exciting to watch just because we don't dunk.
 Carter: I kind of just feel like people think we don't have the same talents or can do the same thing that men can do. One thing that they can probably do better than us, which is dunk. But we can display dribbling, we can display the same amount of shooting. There are girls out there who can simulate men's basketball just as well as men can.

How does it feel to be viewed as a part of the next wave of players tasked with continuing to progress the game?
 McCowan: I think I've set myself up in positions to perform as well as I am now. Turning everything around, not just being just another big, [but] being mobile, having an extra drive to get better and be better.

Durr: It's awesome. It feels good to see your hard work pay off. I'm staying hungry and humble, but I'm thankful, very thankful. I grew up as a very thankful kid; my parents taught me that. I'll never forget and will always keep that wherever I go, no matter what takes place.

Carter: A lot of players are really good. Asia Durr, Katie Lou [Samuelson of UConn], Arike, those type of girls going to the league, they are bringing more talent, and I feel like women's basketball will be more fun to watch and it'll be more enjoyable. I feel like they're sleep, but as it keeps evolving, players grow up and players keep getting drafted, I feel like it'll be a more watched sport and people will start to take it more seriously as we do. We're not only playing for ourselves, but there's reason behind every struggle and every story.

Brown: It feels great. I like to think people my size, they don't really make them like us anymore, so you see more of those versatile posts. I like to say I'm part of the old school, honestly, but I'm coming with the new wave. There's not many of us left, true 5 players who stay under the basket. I like it.

Ogunbowale: Just to be able to play and for people to be interested in it. We do it for fun. We've all played in the backyard, played with boys all our lives. So to be able to play against girls and showcase our talents, I just go out there and have fun.

Jackson on 1,000 points, transferring to Baylor and taking on South Carolina

Waco Tribune-Herald By: Krista Pirtle November 30, 2018

When Jennifer Roberts told her she needed only three more points, Chloe Jackson had no idea what she was talking about. Fourth-ranked Baylor was up big over Southern with the minutes winding down. Jackson already had 11 points, so Roberts wasn't talking the senior point guard joining the double-digit club for the fourth time in as many games.

No, what Baylor's Coordinator of Operations was trying to let Jackson know was that she was a mere three points away from reaching 1,000 in her collegiate career. And Jackson had no clue.

While she didn't reach the milestone on that Thursday night in Waco, Jackson topped it with her second bucket of the night in Baylor's win over South Dakota State in Vegas a week ago.

Keep this in mind: Jackson reached the 1,000-point mark in just over two seasons of college basketball action. Her first season at NC State, Jackson had to sit out after she fractured her foot. After gaining a medical redshirt, she transferred to LSU. After sitting out that first year due to NCAA transfer rules, Jackson finally played for the first time in two years. That season, she averaged 13.1 points after totaling 418. Then last year, Jackson led LSU with 18.1 points per game for a total of 526 points. In total, it took Jackson just 71 games to hit the 1,000 mark which means she averaged 14.3 points per contest.

"It's a blessing, for sure," Jackson said. "A lot of people in four years aren't able to achieve 1,000 points. I wouldn't be anything without my teammates, here and at LSU, who helped me."

After graduating from LSU with a degree in business, Jackson decided to finish her collegiate basketball career at Baylor. The main thing that drew her to Baylor: her thirst for a championship.

"I wanted to win," Jackson said. "When I came on my visit, I loved the team. The coaches kept it real, and I liked that. Where I would be playing, things they would teach me and I would carry on to the next level I thought was a major key in me getting better in basketball."

Part of that, for Jackson, meant changing positions. She's gone from a shooting guard — she's on the Ann Meyers Drysdale Award watch list that recognizes the top shooting guard in women's college basketball — to point guard.

"It's hard, well, not hard, but it's a change," Jackson said. "I went from not being a vocal leader to having to step up and be a vocal leader on this team. Having a coach that played that point guard position is a little bit tougher because she is going to be on your back every day. I like it though. I thought it was going to be a challenge. I thought it could make it better."

Not only does Jackson have to be more vocal, she also has to know the plays better than anyone. Of course, she has to know her part, but she also needs to know where everyone else has to be. Jackson has had to make sure she knows all of this in an offensive system she's known for maybe two months.

"That first month in October when we had practices, four-hour long practices, I had to stay after sometimes and just learn the plays. In order to be a point guard, you have to know where everyone has to be on the court. I can't lead if I don't know what to do."

 She's also had to become a bit more pass-first minded, something that comes with orchestrating the offense as a point guard. But a prolific scorer like Jackson has to balance those assists with knowing when to shoot her own shot.

"That's something I knew coming here that my role would be," Jackson said. "I was OK with that. I want to do what I can to win. I want a championship. If that means taking fewer shots here and looking to pass more, I'm completely OK with that. That's in my arsenal, too."

During the two seasons she played at LSU, Jackson took part in the annual SEC/Big 12 Women's Basketball Challenge. LSU won each of those matchups with a win over TCU in 2017 and another over Texas Tech in 2017. Jackson looks to carry her winning ways over to the Big 12 side of things this year. Currently, the Big 12 holds a 2-0 lead over the SEC as Kansas topped LSU, 68-61, and TCU outlasted Ole Miss, 55-50, Thursday night.

Jackson and Baylor take their turn in the SEC/Big 12 Challenge when the Lady Bears travel to No. 18 South Carolina for a 6 p.m. tip Sunday that will be nationally televised on ESPN2.

During her time at LSU, Jackson went up against South Carolina twice. Last year was the only time she's played at South Carolina's Colonial Life Arena. Last season, the Gamecocks led the nation in attendance with an average of 13,239 fans per game. That's 3,000 more than second-place UConn with 10,026. Baylor was ninth on the list with 5,849. South Carolina still leads the nation in attendance this season with 11,390 fans per game.

"It's crazy," Jackson said of South Carolina's home court advantage. "The one time we played there it was their senior night with (unanimous National Player of the Year and the No. 1 WNBA Draft pick) A'ja Wilson. It was intense. I love playing in front of big crowds like that. I think it's great for women's basketball."

From sweet potato pie to a La Vega state title, a holiday hangout with Juicy Landrum

Waco Tribune-Herald By: Krista Pirtle December 30, 2018

It's been more than two weeks since we've last seen the Lady Bears play. It's been even longer, nearly three weeks, since seventh-ranked Baylor took the floor at the Ferrell Center.

In that time, we've had signing day for college football programs, the Cowboys won the NFC East, LeBron James was named the AP male athlete of the year while Serena Williams was named the AP female athlete of the year and Luka Doncic continued to put on a show for the Mavericks.

And, of course, Baylor won the Texas Bowl.

For Juicy Landrum, there was another big sporting event that happened in the near 20-day span since the Lady Bears played in front of their home fans. La Vega, her alma mater, won the Class 4A Division I state football championship.

Saturday afternoon, two days after the Lady Bears returned to practice from some time at home with loved ones for the Christmas holidays, the Trib sat down with the Baylor junior for a little Christmas chat.

With the Peach Bowl playing on the television inside the weight room, Landrum talked about what the Lady Bears learned from their loss at Stanford, how her family celebrates Christmas, the Pirates' state title and the holiday food she'd rather not eat.

Trib: What have you been up to since the Stanford game?

Landrum: We had a 10 day break. I pretty much spent time with my family. I came up here (to the Ferrell Center) to work out for five days out of those 10 days.

Trib: When everybody flew home from Stanford was everybody going their separate ways with only a few coming back to the Waco area?

Landrum: Aquira (DeCosta) is from Cali, so she went home with her parents. (Caitlin) Bickle flew from Cali to Arizona. The rest of us flew back to Dallas, and some people live in Dallas. They went their separate ways. There were just a few of us on the bus back. It was weird because it was quiet. We're not used to being quiet since we're always talking to each other.

Trib: What's it been like to have a couple days off?

Landrum: It's been good. I knew once we came back to practice it would be hectic since we've been gone so many days. Everybody would be tired from getting to spend so much time at home.

Trib: It's easy for you living so close to Baylor, but what's it like to work on staying in shape over a holiday break?

Landrum: It's actually good. I wasn't tired when we came back to practice. (Head coach Kim Mulkey) pushed us kind of hard, but that's what we expected. I wasn't tired because I came up here and conditioned, so it was really good.

Trib: What were you doing specifically during those conditioning workouts?

Landrum: I came up here with Thomas, our strength and conditioning coach. I'd do a few weights. Then I'd get on the treadmill one day. One day I'd do the bike. We'd keep alternating in those five days.

Trib: So what is your favorite thing about Christmas with your family?

Landrum: I have a niece now, so getting to spend time with her. It's her second Christmas. This year she got an iPad. She randomly FaceTimes me sometimes. It's great. She got that and a lot of clothes. She got a kitchen set and a lot of those things. It was fun.

Trib: What did you get for Christmas?

Landrum: My parents tell me I'm too old to get Christmas gifts now. My mom got me clothes, my dad gave me money and my sister got me shoes. It was fine.

 Trib: What does the usual Christmas meal look like at your house?
 Landrum: For me, I don't eat Thanksgiving food, so my family has to get me something else. Normally it's turkey, ham, dressing, mac and cheese, greens, cabbage. My grandma made me a meatloaf and I just ate the sides. We had barbeque this time too. It was pretty good.
 Trib: Why do you not like the Thanksgiving spread?
 Landrum: I don't know, I'm just not a big fan of ham and turkey. It's not good to me. I put it in my mouth and it's not good. But the pie is good. My grandma makes really good pie.
 Trib: OK, so what's your favorite pie?
 Landrum: Sweet potato for sure.
 Trib: So pie, meatloaf, all the food, but you can't really pig out on all the food because you're in season.
 Landrum: I felt like I conditioned all those days, and then I ate all that food and (my work) went to waste.
 Trib: While you were off, La Vega won its second football state title. Had you been keeping up with them all season?
 Landrum: I actually went to the football game. I drove to Arlington and went to the game. It was great. I saw a lot of my old teachers, classmates, our superintendent. It was great.
 Trib: Wait, how old were you when the Pirates won their first title in 2015?
 Landrum: I was a junior in high school when they won that one. I knew the majority of the football team then.
 Trib: What was it like watching them play in that championship game this year?
 Landrum: Coach (Don) Hyde has been there since I've been in high school. I talk to him sometimes when I go back to La Vega and talk to my basketball coach. Me and him have conversations sometimes about basketball and life in general.
 Trib: Not only did La Vega win state, but the Baylor football team won the Texas Bowl. Did you watch that game?
 Landrum: I actually watched that one. I went to eat with Honesty (Scott-Grayson) and we watched it on the TV at the restaurant. Then I went home and finished the game. It was great.
 Trib: Now with New Year's coming up, do you have any resolutions?
 Landrum: Not really. I just need to save money. I think I buy too many pairs of shoes.
 Trib: What kind of shoes?
 Landrum: Probably Jordans. I think I own like 30-plus pairs of Jordans. I need to maybe stop buying so much. I have 1-14 of the Jordans.
 Trib: What's your favorite pair that you have?
 Landrum: The white and black 11's. I just bought them. Well I had them a long time ago, but I grew out of them.
 Trib: Back to basketball to wrap this up. What did this team learn from the loss at Stanford?
 Landrum: Every minute you have to play hard. Coach told us we didn't play hard enough. We know we didn't play hard until we got down by a certain amount of points. (Mulkey) emphasized that we have to play hard every second of the game.
 Trib: So how can you carry that lesson over to the rest of the season?
 Landrum: Coach says we really have to execute our offense. Our defense was terrible, as she would say. I guess that's what we're working on is getting better on defense.

Tale of the tape: Kim vs. Geno

Waco Tribune-Herald By: Krista Pirtle January 2, 2019

On Thursday night, two of the most successful coaches in women's basketball history face off as No. 8 Baylor hosts No. 1 Connecticut. Huskies coach Geno Auriemma and Lady Bears coach Kim Mulkey are the top two winningest active coaches by percentage, as Auriemma has won 88.4 percent (1,038-136) of his games and Mulkey has won 84.7 percent (548-99) as a head coach.

"I've always respected and appreciated what he's done for the game," Mulkey said. "In this profession, people have opinions of you from afar that may or may not be justified. He's always treated me and spoken highly of me and treated me with respect. The feeling is mutual. How can you not respect someone that's won that much?"

"We're all dinosaurs. ... Keep winning is what those dinosaurs keep doing. They just keep winning. I say dinosaurs with the respect of how long you've been coaching in the new generation of people, kids and social media. The dinosaurs don't change. The Nick Sabans don't change, do they? They just keep winning."

Here's a breakdown of Thursday's coaching matchup:

GENO AURIEMMA

- 2006 Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame
- Women's Basketball Hall of Fame
- Eight-time Naismith National Coach of the Year
- Nine-time AP National Coach of the Year
- Seven-time WBCA National Coach of the Year
- 14-time Conference Coach of the Year
- 11 NCAA Championships at UConn

- Head coach of the U.S. Women's National Team (2009-16)
- Three Olympic gold medals

KIM MULKEY

- Women's Basketball Hall of Fame
- 2018 Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame finalist
- 2012 WBCA, Naismith, AP, USBWA National Coach of the Year
- Six-time Big 12 Coach of the Year
- 2 NCAA Championships at Baylor
- Gold medalist on the 1984 U.S. Olympic team
- Only basketball coach to win a national championship as a head coach, assistant coach and player
- 2009 Texas Sports Hall of Fame inductee
- 2011 USBWA National Coach of the Year

No. 1 UConn's 126-game win streak ends 68-57 at No. 8 Baylor

WACO, Texas (AP) — Geno Auriemma knew that top-ranked UConn couldn't keep winning every regular-season game it played, even though the Huskies had won 126 in a row.

That winning streak of more than four years ended with a 68-57 loss Thursday night at No. 8 Baylor, which won against a No. 1 team for the first time.

"What is disappointing for me, not that we lost. How long did you think you were going to win every game in the regular season, 10 years?," Auriemma said. "So I'm not surprised that we lost, but it was disappointing that we struggled so much on the offensive end."

The Huskies (11-1) hadn't lost a regular-season game in regulation since a 76-70 home loss to Baylor in a Nos. 1 vs. 2 matchup on Feb. 18, 2013 — a span of 163 games. Their only regular-season loss since then was 88-86 in overtime at Stanford on Nov. 14, 2014.

"Stanford in 2014. Think about that," Auriemma said.

The 11-time national champion Huskies shot only 29 percent (20 of 68) with their lowest point total this season. Their only lead came at 2-0 when Crystal Dangerfield scored in the opening minute of the game.

Kalani Brown had 22 points and 17 rebounds for the Lady Bears (10-1), before a sellout crowd of 10,284 at the Ferrell Center.

UConn is the only No. 1 team Baylor has ever faced in 19 seasons under coach Kim Mulkey, who has two national championships coaching the Lady Bears. They had lost each of the previous three such meetings, including UConn's last visit to Waco nearly five years ago.

"Connecticut gets everybody's best shot. They don't lose much, we don't lose much," Mulkey said. "When you can do it year after year after year, taking people's best shots and you have a shot to play each other, it's good for women's basketball."

Chloe Jackson added 13 points, eight assists and seven rebounds for Baylor, while NaLyssa Smith had 12 points. Juicy Landrum scored 11 points, while Lauren Cox added nine points, seven rebounds and five blocks.

Napheesa Collier had 16 points and 11 rebounds for UConn, while Katie Lou Samuelson also had a double-double with 12 points and 11 rebounds. But the two seniors were a combined 10-of-34 shooting. Dangerfield had 11 points and Megan Walker 10.

Baylor led 30-29 at halftime. The Huskies finished with nine turnovers to just five for Baylor.

"It just felt like everyone was kind of stagnant out there. We were all just looking at each other," said Samuelson, who was guarded by sophomore DiDi Richards and missed her first six shots and finished 4-of-16. "We weren't hitting those difficult shots, and sometimes we do, but we don't always. When we're not getting shots in our offense, we shoot worse than we normally do. That's on us to be able to figure that out."

Mulkey was impressed by the defense of Richards.

"That kid defended Samuelson with every ounce of energy that she had," Mulkey said. "DiDi has the length, she's active, she made Samuelson work for every shot."

BIG PICTURE

UConn: Auriemma's team was coming off tough wins at Oklahoma and California. After both games, he said that's the usual experience for most teams. However, this time UConn couldn't pull off a late comeback. The last time UConn had consecutive losses was in 1993 — a span of 937 games going into its conference opener.

Baylor: The Lady Bears have won 28 consecutive home games. They extended their non-conference home winning streak to 45 games since a home loss to UConn on Jan. 13, 2014.

IN THE PAINT

Baylor outscored UConn 52-10 in the paint. The Lady Bears were led by 6-foot-7 Brown and 6-4 Cox. Brown finished 11 of 17 from the field. "Are you surprised that they scored 52 points in the paint," Auriemma said. "I would think they would suck if they didn't score 52 points in the paint. They've got every one of our guys by six inches, so we knew that was going to happen, and we were OK with that. What we weren't OK with was how hard it was for us to get the shots that we wanted. And then when we did get the shots that we wanted, we didn't make any of them."

Brice Cherry: Basketball wins whenever UConn, Baylor clash

Waco-Tribune Herald: Jan. 3, 2019, Brice Cherry

Long before the spirit towels were nestled into their seats, before the parking lot transformed into an every-minivan-for-themselves free-for-all, before WNBA head coach Bill Laimbeer elbowed his way to his seat among the scouts, the outcome was already decided.

This was a win. A big one.

Not for the teams involved, mind you. Oh, of course it means something to Baylor, just as it would have meant something to Connecticut. But those teams carry very specific, very selfish (selfish in a good way) goals.

No, this was a win for basketball. This was good for the game.

Again, I'm not trying to take away from the Lady Bears' monumental, breakthrough triumph. Good for them. It was their first win over a No. 1 team in program history, and it was well-earned.

But you can't get your groove on unless you first step onto the dance floor. Or, to put it another way, you can't get an opportunity for such a win unless you first schedule the game.

Basketball needs these kinds of games. Not men's basketball, not women's basketball. Just basketball, period.

"It's good for women's basketball to have this type of environment," Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said, following the Lady Bears' 68-57 victory. "Look guys, that was a big-time atmosphere. It reminded me of the old days."

At one point, in the waning minutes, as the towel-waving fans hit a resounding crescendo and it felt as though that golden Ferrell Center lid was about to pop, I looked around and thought, man, this is what college basketball is supposed to feel like.

Fortunately, this won't be the last time that feeling visits Waco. Spoiler alert – déjà vu is coming. In October, the schools announced that they'd continue the series through the 2020-21 season. Baylor will travel to Connecticut next year, then the Huskies will return to Waco the following season.

That's a marvelous first step. Here's a better one – extend the series through the next decade. Make it as much an annual event as paying your taxes. They broker college football contracts for a jillion years in advance, what's to prevent doing the same in basketball?

"Honestly, if we're playing them next year there and they come back the next year, I can only live in the moment," said Mulkey, when asked if she'd like to play UConn every year. "When you've been doing this as long as (UConn coach Geno Auriemma) has and as long as I have, you can't sign things for 10 and 15 years, because you don't know how long you'll be in the business."

Oh, come on. Insert your own eye roll here. Here's another spoiler alert – Kim can coach at Baylor as long as she pleases, assuming her health holds up. Same goes for Geno at UConn. They've earned their ticket. Nobody is slipping a pink slip under their office doors.

These types of heavyweight clashes have long-reaching ripple effects. They impact fan support, they impact recruiting, they probably even impact donor giving. And, then, for the teams themselves, these games contain inherent benefits, whether you're on the winning or the losing side.

No offense to the Rio Grande Valleys and Morehead States of the world, but a game against UConn is going to teach you much more about yourself than those opponents.

Beyond that, they're just fun. Fun for the fans, which is why the game produced the program's first sellout since 2016. Fun for the TV viewers watching on ESPN. Even fun for those of us on press row, with no dog in the fight. We like watching good ball too, you know. We like having to plug our ears because of the crowd's genuine screeching, and not because of some artificially-produced, eardrum-bleeding, chest-thumping bass.

In the immediate moments after the game, Mulkey downplayed the impact of the win. She'd already turned her attention to Friday's practice, as Baylor's Big 12 opener at Texas Tech awaits on Sunday.

"We will enjoy this, and they should enjoy it, but you can't overemphasize it. You just can't," she said.

That's why she wins. When you're in the midst of the battle, you've got to stay focused on the next target in front of you, and not the one you just terminated.

But games like Thursday's UConn-Baylor duel? That's why basketball wins.

"Connecticut gets everybody's best shot. They don't lose much. We don't lose much,"

Mulkey said. "When you can do it year after year after year taking people's best shots, and you have an opportunity to play each other, it's good for women's basketball."

Play it again, ma'am.

Unprecedented upset
No. 8 Lady Bears down No. 1 UConn with total team effort, 68-57

Waco-Tribune Herald: Jan. 4, 2019, Krista Pirtle

With a sold-out crowd of 10,284 on their feet waving white rally towels in the air, the celebration was on. Sure, there were plenty of big plays by the Lady Bears throughout the 40 minutes of regulation that resulted in plenty of chest bumps, fist pumps and flat-out screams of joy as eighth-ranked Baylor continued to exert its will. But what shouts the Lady Bears let out when the game clock hit zero.

Against the No. 1 team in the nation that boasted a 126-game regular season win streak, the Lady Bears put together the total team effort to take down mighty Connecticut, 68-57, inside the Ferrell Center.

"We're all chasing (UConn head coach) Geno (Auriemma)," Baylor head coach Kim Mulkey said. "I want people to be proud of this program. I want them to be proud of this program because we win on a consistent basis."

Coming into Thursday night's national televised contest, UConn head coach Geno Auriemma mentioned how concerned he was with defending Baylor's 6-foot-7 center Kalani Brown. And the Lady Bear senior was a problem for the Huskies.

Brown finished with 22 points off 10-of-16 shooting from the floor in addition to pulling down 17 rebounds. She scored 12 of those points in the second half as the Lady Bears focused more on getting the ball inside the paint.

"Coach got on us, and me and Lauren (Cox) took it upon ourselves to respond (after the Stanford game)," Brown said. "Defensively, I think did a great job. Lauren played well guarding Katie Lou (Samuelson) and Napheesa (Collier). It's not normal for us to both have a bad game (at Stanford) like that. Since we laid an egg we wanted to redeem ourselves. That's what we did."

Connecticut tied things up at 32 with 8:42 left in the third quarter, and the duo of Brown and Cox took over from there to give the home team a seven-point lead. The Lady Bears built that advantage to 10 points, but back-to-back 3-pointers by UConn freshman Christyn Williams cut Baylor's lead to four heading into the final quarter of the night.

"The energy we had was crazy today," Brown said. "If we play every game like that, there's no telling where we'll end up. Our size affected their shots and their penetrating. Everyone had a job."

While Brown continued to get buckets for the Lady Bears in the fourth quarter, Chloe Jackson finally caught fire. The senior guard, whom Mulkey dubbed one of, if not the best midrange shooter in the country, got off to a cold start, missing the shots she usually makes.

But in the do or die fourth quarter, Jackson was nothing but net. The point guard, after going 2-for-11 through the first three quarters, went 4-for-8 from the floor in the fourth to score nine of her 11 points in the final quarter.

"Coach Mulkey kept telling me to shoot the ball," Jackson said. "My coaches and teammates have seen me make those shots in practice. They're not shots I can't make. They had the faith and the trust in me to keep shooting. They gave me all the confidence I needed."

In addition to hitting the big shots late that kept Baylor's lead at six points or higher, Jackson also finished the night with eight assists and zero turnovers in addition to four steals.

While it was Jackson who helped Baylor pull away, it was junior Juicy Landrum that helped the Lady Bears jump out to an early lead. Left wide open from about a yard behind the perimeter, Landrum never hesitated as she put up a triple and drained it.

The next time she touched the ball on the offensive end of the floor, it was the same story. Her quick six points from the great beyond forced UConn to face guard her for the rest of the first half, meaning her defender watched only her the entire time.

Landrum finished the game with 11 points off a 3-for-4 night from the perimeter.

"UConn came out with a box and one defense," Mulkey said. "I watched him do it against the Robertson kid at Oklahoma. Juicy hit some big 3s. She was looking to shoot it. What a difference it made to be a junior. She wouldn't look to shoot those shots her freshman year. ... Juicy has taken it upon herself to score the basketball out here."

Freshman NaLyssa Smith was the final Lady Bear to put up double figures. The forward was all grit on the offensive glass as she pulled down four of Baylor's 13 total offensive rebounds that led to 14 second chance points for the Lady Bears. Smith, meanwhile, finished with 12 points off a 6-for-9 shooting night.

"NaLyssa is one of the finest freshmen in the country," Mulkey said. "NaLyssa reminds me of when Cox came into the program. Knowing Cox and Kalani are here, she knew she was good enough to get into that rotation. What a joy she is to coach."

While Baylor finished shooting 43.5 percent from the floor, the Lady Bear defense held the Huskies to 29.4 percent shooting on the night.

While senior Napheesa Collier finished near her average of 18.6 points with 16 points on the night, Katie Lou Samuelson was held to 12 points off 4-of-16 shooting. The 6-foot-3 senior usually averages around 20.1 points.

"Their two seniors, Collier and Samuelson, (are) their bread and butter," Mulkey said. "Guard them. Don't give up transition layups. They're a great shooting team."

It was the defense of Baylor sophomore DiDi Richards that kept her off balance offensively.

BAYLOR NEWS CLIPS

In the first half, Richards got in foul trouble with around seven minutes in the second quarter. In the first half alone, when Richards was guarding her, Samuelson was 0-for-6 for two points. When Richards was on the bench, Samuelson was 3-for-4 for seven points.

And when it wasn't Richards playing great one on one defense against Samuelson, the long arm of the law, better known as the long arm of Baylor junior Lauren Cox, was there to alter shots. The 6-foot-4 forward finished with five blocks on the night.

"Let me give kudos to DiDi Richards," Mulkey said. "That kid defended Samuelson with every ounce of energy that she had. DiDi has the length, she's active. She made Samuelson work for every shot. She didn't go for shot fakes. ... We matched up DiDi and Cox on their best players. That was important for us."

Now, the Lady Bears have a quick turnaround as Big 12 play begins Sunday with a noon tip at Texas Tech.

"The most important thing on my mind right now ... is Lubbock, Tex. and Texas Tech," Mulkey said. "We're going to enjoy this, and we should, but we can't over-emphasize it. We can't. Our league is tough. It's physical. We play each other twice."

DiDi as in defense: Lady Bears' Richards emerging as lockdown defender

Waco-Tribune Herald, Jan. 8, 2019, Krista Pirtle

It could be called "DiDi defense," really. But something that can't be said without a smile has proven deadly to opposing sharpshooters when Baylor's DiDi Richards guards them.

Connecticut's Katie Lou Samuelson can tell you all about it. One of the best shooters in women's college basketball was held to nearly half of her average against Richards and the Lady Bears. The usual "money" efficiency with which she shoots behind the 3-point line was overdrawn.

"It's something I take pride in," Richards said. "Before it was, like, second nature just to play defense. Now it's like something I'm going to be good at and practice to be better at. ... Before, I was getting yelled at because (Mulkey) knew I was a better defender than what I was showing. Now it's like I don't want to be yelled at. If I don't want to get yelled at, I'm going to play defense and make sure the other team's best player isn't scoring."

Behind the lead of Richards, the Lady Bears held the Huskies to their lowest shooting percentage in 20 years.

Three days later in the Big 12 opener at Texas Tech, Richards moved over to freshman sniper Chrislyn Carr of the Lady Raiders. Carr finished 3-for-11 for eight points in the second quarter and went 1-for-9 in the third for four points. In those two quarters alone, Baylor as a whole held the Lady Raiders to 25 and 9.5 percent shooting from the floor, respectively.

"She's one of our best defensive players," sophomore Trinity Oliver said. "Without DiDi and her energy and stopping the best players the other team has, I don't think we'd win as many games as we are winning. She's a key person for us."

On Wednesday, Richards will again draw the assignment of defending the opposing team's best player. And against Kansas State, that means Kayla Goth.

"(She's) a great mid-range shooter," Richards said of Goth. "My defensive assignment is to not let her score as much as she normally scores."

Goth, a 6-1 guard, joined the 1,000-point club for her career with a triple in the Wildcats' last game against Oklahoma. She's averaging 12.3 points per game and is responsible for 44 percent of Kansas State's buckets this season. As if that's not enough, Goth is also the Big 12 leader in assists with 6.2 per game.

"Well, she's finally a senior. It seems like she's been there forever," Mulkey said. "She's just a big guard that can shoot the mid-range and can and will make the 3 as well. ... We're going to defend in man, like we always do, and know strengths and weaknesses. And it starts with Goth. She's a big scorer for them."

While Goth is the best all-around player for the Wildcats, the top scorer is actually Peyton Williams. Does her name sound familiar? The 6-4 junior is a two-sport athlete for Kansas State as she also plays volleyball.

So far this season, Williams is averaging a near double-double with 14.4 points and 9.9 rebounds.

Goth and Williams form a deadly duo. Last season, they were the only set of teammates in the country who each improved their scoring average by 10 or more points, as Goth went from 4.8 to 17.5 points per game and Williams increased from 3.7 to 14.7 points per game.

More than likely, Lauren Cox will get the assignment of guarding Williams, who is shooting 57.8 percent from the floor and 46.2 percent from the 3-point line (6-for-13).

"Cox can also defend on the perimeter," Mulkey said. "I thought our assigning those two to (Napheesa) Collier and Samuelson in the UConn game was really the right move. They were active, long, could talk and communicate and switch if need be. And without question."

Along with Goth and Williams, Kansas State owns a couple of willing shooters in Christianna Carr and Rachel Ranke. Carr, a 6-1 freshman, hasn't found her rhythm from deep yet at 26.1 percent from 3, but look out when she does because she's already putting up nearly 10 points a game. Named to the All-Big 12 Freshman team a year ago, the 6-1 Ranke is shooting 34.4 percent from the perimeter to average 10.6 points per game. She's coming off her season's best offensive output with a 19-point outing.

Actually, the Wildcats put up their season's overall highest numbers in the 86-56 thrashing of Oklahoma as the 86 points were the most Kansas State has scored this season and the Wildcats shot a season-best 54.2 percent from the floor. K-State also caught fire in the second quarter to shoot a season-high 78.6 percent in that frame.

"We have to rush them off the 3-point line for sure," Baylor's Oliver said. "We have to make them dribble, make them attack instead of getting those set shots. Goth, we have to keep her from getting in that rhythm early. We have to make them turn the ball over, and not let them get hot early."

Baylor's Kalani Brown hopes to follow in her NBA dad's footsteps

ESPN's The Undefeated, Jan. 16, 2019, Sean Hurd

Kalani Brown thought it was destiny.

Her Baylor Lady Bears ranked No. 3 in the nation toward the end of the 2017 regular season, and Brown could picture herself climbing the confetti-laden ladder and hoisting the net on the way to clinching the school's first Final Four berth since 2012.

But after senior guard Kristy Wallace tore her ACL in the season finale, the team lost its backcourt anchor. The Lady Bears were eliminated in the Sweet 16, and Brown's dream was put on hold. Again.

The weight of potentially leaving Baylor without ending the school's Final Four drought hangs over Brown's head each day. With each passing season, it has become heavier, and Brown hungrier. Despite being a two-time All-American and the reigning Big 12 Player of the Year, Brown has been troubled by the absence of a deep postseason run.

"I'm hungrier than ever," Brown said, "not just because I'm a senior but because I've been knocking on that door for four years."

On the upside, after Baylor's 68-57 upset of No. 1 UConn on Jan. 3, the Huskies' first regular-season loss since 2014, Brown's last shot with this year's No. 2-ranked Bears team may be her best.

Brown didn't have to look far to learn about the patience required to go deep in the postseason or win a national championship. Brown is the daughter of longtime NBA journeyman P.J. Brown, whose 15-year career ended with his first title in 2008 as a member of the Boston Celtics. Brown was at TD Garden the night her dad hoisted the Larry O'Brien Trophy.

"I remember his championship and him winning, the different teams he played for," said Brown, who lived in five different cities growing up. "I was like 9 at the time, so I didn't really understand the seriousness of it. Now that I'm older, I definitely get what his hardship was and what he was going through."

In many ways, Brown's game runs similarly to her father's. She's physical and agile, a blue-collar type of player with a knack for finding the ball in the paint. But ask Brown who helped her construct the foundation of her game and without hesitation she'll give all the credit to her mom, Dee.

Dee Brown played collegiate basketball too, suiting up for Louisiana Tech in the late '80s. She was also Brown's assistant coach in high school, as well as her AAU coach.

"My dad wasn't really involved as much as everyone thinks he was. It was really my mom," said Brown, the Louisiana Gatorade Player of the Year in 2014. "She was home with me working with me, building my game. My mom was pretty much my rock for my entire career."

When it came time to choose where Brown would play college ball, schools such as Texas A&M (which made it to the championship game in 2012) and Tennessee were ready to make the top-ranked center of her class the face of their program. But Baylor had an almost familial tie to the Brown household that no other school could compete with.

When Dee Brown played at Louisiana Tech, an assistant coach for the Lady Techsters was none other than Kim Mulkey, who took over as the head coach of Baylor in 2000. Mulkey had watched Brown play since the seventh grade.

Early in her Baylor career, Brown walked into the locker room with her teammates to find Mulkey standing amid newspaper clippings about the previous night's loss sprawled all over the floor. Mulkey appeared to have been in the locker room the entire night.

"Did you guys sleep?" Mulkey asked her team.

No player responded.

"Kalani Brown, did you sleep? I have not been to sleep at all! I've been thinking about the loss all night long."

Once the team was in the clear, Brown immediately phoned Dee Brown — the only person who'd truly understand what Brown just experienced. "You said she was going to do this!"

"Yep, been there, done that," Dee Brown said, laughing, adding that Mulkey is a master motivator.

Dee Brown adopted Mulkey's coaching style from her playing days, so much so that the two have almost become a revolving record for Brown.

"Sometimes they say the exact same thing; it's kind of scary," Brown said.

When Brown was a freshman, Dee Brown said, she had a hard time letting go of the "coach" title that she had held for Brown's entire life.

"She would call me and would want me to just be Mom," she said.

Before Baylor's matchup against UConn this season, undoubtedly the team's biggest matchup of the regular season, Brown had her worst offensive game of the year in a Dec. 15 loss to Stanford: five points on 2-for-7 shooting.

BAYLOR NEWS CLIPS

Coming to Brown's rescue wasn't her former high school coach, nor was it her former AAU coach, it was just Dee, Kalani's mom.

"Before [the UConn game], Mom had to make the trip and give her the pregame talk," Dee Brown said. "I said, 'Hey, the sky's the limit for you and what you do with this young team and being a leader, stepping out there and having the energy that you need.'"

Brown responded emphatically. Against what was then the top team in the country, she put together the best game of her career against the Huskies. Brown finished with 22 points and 17 rebounds as Baylor handed UConn its first road loss in regulation since Dec. 18, 2011.

In an evolving sport where frontcourt players have transitioned to a face-up style of play and drifted away from the paint, Brown represents the old guard. Since Brown was so much bigger than everybody else growing up, her mother taught her that her body and her post were her "bread and butter." As a result, Brown is a left-handed, back-to-the-basket true 5 who stays home in the paint — a rarity at both the collegiate and professional levels.

"People my size, they don't really make them like us anymore," said Brown, who is listed at 6 feet, 7 inches. "I like to say I'm part of the old school, honestly, but I'm coming with the new wave."

Brown has established herself as one of the best frontcourt finishers in college basketball. If Brown catches the ball on the low block, her combination of size, footwork and athleticism puts opposing defenses on their heels. In 2017, she finished second in the nation in field goal percentage, shooting 67.9 percent, the highest mark in Baylor history. Last season, she ranked fourth in field goal percentage while averaging a double-double: 20.1 points and 10.2 rebounds per game. Against UConn, Brown led all players in points and rebounds.

"Kalani's size is something you can't coach, and it's something that you're blessed to have on your team," Mulkey said of Brown, who is averaging 15.2 points and 7.3 rebounds this season. "She's certainly one of the best players, if not the best player, in the country."

Despite being one of the top talents in the country with an overflow of accolades, Brown often flies under the radar. While Brown does believe she's underrated in the national conversation, she's never been one to ask for a brighter spotlight.

"My dad has always been in the spotlight," Brown said. "I never really liked the spotlight; it kind of makes me nervous."

To better understand Brown's personality: "I'm kind of like a Tim Duncan," Brown said. "Drop a silent 20 and I'ma get out."

Brown grew up as a fan of LSU and modeled her game after Sylvia Fowles, now a two-time WNBA champion with the Minnesota Lynx.

"Out of all the big girls I used to watch, Sylvia Fowles is the one who stood out to me," said Brown, who is expected to be a top-five pick in the WNBA draft. "If I get to the next level and my team is playing her, I'll probably ask for an autograph."

The admiration is mutual. Fowles, who was named WNBA MVP in 2017, praised the Baylor center for her basketball IQ, strength under the basket and "phenomenal" hands.

"I think she's going to shine, and I can't wait to see her in the WNBA," said Fowles, who reached out to Brown via text a few years ago. "It's rare that you get bigs that play back to the basket. When we get them, we've got to keep them close because we're very special to the game."

Regardless of this season's outcome, Brown will leave Baylor as one of the best in program history. She'll finish her career in the top 10 all-time in points, rebounds, blocks, double-doubles and field goal percentage. While Brown will walk off the Baylor floor for the final time in April, she hopes what remains is a Final Four banner.

"I've accomplished a lot of great things at Baylor as far as accolades go," Brown said. "I just think the last thing I need to accomplish before I get out of here is a Final Four."

Perhaps, like her father, saving the best for last runs in the family.

Lady Bears ascend to No. 1 in AP poll

Associated Press, Jan. 28, 2019

Don't look now, but the Lady Bears are back on top.

The Baylor women's basketball team ascended to the No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press Top 25 poll on Monday for the first time since March 18, 2013. The Lady Bears are 17-1 on the season with a 7-0 mark in Big 12 play and four wins over Top 25 opponents.

The road to the No. 1 ranking opened after previously top-ranked Notre Dame lost to unranked North Carolina on Sunday.

"Anything that's considered positive for our program and Baylor, we welcome," Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said, following the Lady Bears' win over Oklahoma on Sunday. "But really, what does it mean? It doesn't mean anything. It doesn't win a championship for you. It just puts a bigger target on your back. It's not the first time we've been ranked No. 1 ... I don't think it will change anything about the kids in the locker room. I don't think it will change anything about our practices. Our focus, right now, is Oklahoma State, and then our big focus is winning another Big 12 championship."

Baylor received 24 of 28 first-place votes from a national media panel. The Fighting Irish fell to fifth, with UConn, Louisville and Oregon following Baylor.

This marks the 40th time Baylor has been ranked No. 1 in the weekly poll. The Lady Bears spent seven weeks in the top slot from January to mid-February in 2011, then spent 21-straight weeks as the favorite from Oct. 29, 2011-Nov. 12, 2012 and ranked No. 1 the last 11 weeks of the 2012-13 season. Baylor's 21-week streak was the eighth-longest streak of all-time.

The Lady Bears are 4-1 vs. ranked opponents this season with wins at No. 23 Arizona State (Nov. 11), at No. 18 South Carolina (Dec. 2), a loss at No. 11 Stanford (Dec. 15), a win over No. 1 UConn (Jan. 3) and a win over No. 20 Iowa State (Jan. 23).

Next up for No. 1 Baylor is a road trip to Oklahoma State (12-6, 3-4) for a 7 p.m. tip Wednesday in Stillwater.

Jackson's unusual path to point guard for No. 1 Baylor women

Associated Press, Jan. 28, 2019, Stephen Hawkins

WACO, Texas (AP) — Chloe Jackson took an unusual path to being the starting point guard for top-ranked Baylor and coach Kim Mulkey.

Jackson was a graduate transfer last summer after two seasons as a shooting guard at LSU. She was a standout soccer player who also loved basketball in high school, and if not for a rare earthquake affecting her home state of Maryland then, she might now be kicking balls somewhere instead running the floor for the nation's top women's basketball team.

"Chloe has been great to play with. ... Being a point guard is tough, considering I'm the third-string point guard on this team. It's good to see she can come to a new team and run a whole bunch of different plays with a whole different playing system from LSU," Baylor teammate DiDi Richards said. "It's cool to see she can adapt to something so quickly."

Big 12-leading Baylor (17-1) on Monday took over the No. 1 spot in the AP women's basketball poll for the first time since the end of the 2012-13 regular season, when the Lady Bears had All-American point guard Odyssey Sims and national player of the year Brittney Griner.

When Jackson left LSU for Baylor, she was looking for the chance to win a championship and prepare herself for playing at a higher level.

"Never knew how big my role was going to be, but I knew what (Mulkey) wanted me to do, and I felt like that would better me for the next level," Jackson said. "Obviously playing on the biggest stage on an elite level."

Her anticipated role changed drastically in September, when sophomore point guard Alexis Morris was dismissed from the team for violating team rules.

Jackson is averaging 10.9 points, 6.8 assists and 3.6 rebounds a game. The Lady Bears were tied for the national lead with their 1.81 assist-to-turnover ratio, and Jackson was 15th nationally at 2.78 — she has more than four times as many assists as turnovers (37 to 9) in the past four games.

"The biggest adjustment was just being more vocal, having to be that quarterback on the floor ... just having to learn all the plays," Jackson said. "In that month span, going from trying to learn from (Morris), to having to be the one to learn it and teach it."

All while playing for Mulkey, who long before winning two national championships as Baylor's coach played point guard for two national titles at Louisiana Tech and is demanding of her players at that spot.

Mulkey described Jackson as "smart, doesn't try to be something she's not."

In a win over Iowa State last week, Jackson had her first double-double at Baylor with 11 points and 11 assists.

"Everything Chloe does with the ball in her hands impresses me, because that's like taking a wide receiver and making them a quarterback their fifth year in college," Mulkey said. "An athlete might run the ball a lot, but you've got to have patterns, you've got to throw the ball on a dime when they make their cuts, you've got to have a presence in the pocket, and she's having to do all of that stuff."

Jackson played for an elite girls basketball program at Riverdale Baptist High in Maryland, though before her sophomore year in the summer of 2011 she had moved to a different school with a standout soccer team to play both sports there.

"That was a crazy summer," Jackson said. "I spent the whole summer working out, playing soccer and doing all of that, but when school started, I went to school for literally one day and then that night an earthquake occurred. ... Everything happens for a reason. In high school, that happened for a reason. This situation that I'm in right now, it all happened for a reason."

However you word it, Baylor's Moon Ursin has found her shine

By KRISTA PIRTLE krista.pirtle@wacotrib.com Feb 8, 2019

The Texas Longhorns forgot their copy of the book "Goodnight Moon" Monday evening, as there was indeed a full moon out in Austin that no one could stop from rising. There's a new moon this season.

Moon Ursin has lost count of the one-liners she's heard surrounding her nickname, one that came from her aunt because of the shape of her head when she was a baby.

BAYLOR NEWS CLIPS

If she had to pick one — in all honesty she usually just tunes them out — it would have to be “Over the Moon.” Her Twitter handle has a moon emoji by it. The iPhone currently has 13 different moons to choose from. Her favorites are the ones with faces (🌙)

“There have been a lot (of puns),” the Baylor sophomore said. “I hear them and am like, ‘Oh wow.’”

We could also throw in “touch the moon” as well. If you’ve ever seen Ursin play, that makes the most sense. Multiple times, Baylor head coach Kim Mulkey has expressed amazement at how high Ursin rises into the air when she hits a pull-up jumper from the free-throw line.

But Ursin can also touch the rim, a discovery she made in the eighth grade. She still has to figure out what her exact vertical is, though.

“When I was laying the ball up, I was getting very high,” Ursin said. “My god-brother said, ‘I bet you can touch the rim.’ I didn’t know. I went up and did it and was like, ‘OK, that’s new.’ Ever since then I was grabbing rim, grabbing rim. In high school I dunked once. I’m trying to do it again, but again, patience.”

Patience.

That’s been the key for the 5-7 guard, who has waited and waited as a member of the top-ranked Baylor Lady Bears. And her time is now.

Ursin was the first player to ever secure three Gatorade Player of the Year awards in Louisiana.

After she led Destrehan High School to a Class 5A state championship in 2017 with a 35-0 record by averaging 27.6 points, 14.2 rebounds, 7.4 assists, 5.6 steals and 4.1 blocks per game, she didn’t expect to average just over 10 minutes per game in her first year with the Lady Bears.

“It was hard. I’m not going to lie,” Ursin said. “It was very hard, but I never thought about leaving (Baylor.) There were times when I wondered if this was for me. Your mind starts to play tricks on you.”

Lauren Cox knows exactly what Ursin is talking about. While Cox got a little bit more playing time as a freshman than Ursin did, the junior forward understands what it’s like for reality not to live up to expectation.

“I had such high expectations for myself,” Cox said. “I was disappointing myself. I would get on myself. I was hard on myself and all that. I didn’t have a lot of confidence. It was tough. Freshman year was definitely the hardest.”

That’s what Mulkey tells players during the recruiting process. The student-athletes are on their own away from home. They have classes, homework and practice they need to balance. Add on top of that the fact that they’re used to being the best at their respective high schools and, as such, used to playing many more minutes.

“It takes time,” Mulkey said. “Your freshman year is the most difficult year of your life.”

Mulkey went on to point attention to Ursin and Juicy Landrum. Cox and Kalani Brown can even be thrown into that mix as well.

It gets better.

Some people call it the sophomore-year spike. Usually, student-athletes progress the most between their freshmen and sophomore seasons. It makes sense.

They’ve been in the program for a year. They know the system and have gained experience. They’ve also been in the weight room and have a better understanding overall of what’s going on.

Brown went from averaging 9.3 points in 14.4 minutes her freshman year to 15.4 points in 21.4 minutes per game her sophomore year. Cox increased from 7.6 points in 13.4 minutes per game her freshman year to 15.3 points in 30.2 minutes per game her sophomore year. Landrum went from averaging 1.8 points in 9.5 minutes per game her freshman year to 7.4 points in 20.9 her sophomore year.

Now, Moon Ursin has gone from putting up 2.9 points in 10.5 minutes per game to 4.7 points in 12.2 minutes per game as a sophomore.

“LC (Cox) is my roommate on the road,” Ursin said. “She talked to me a lot. She was very helpful. She’s been my rock basically through this hard time. Just to be able to get out there and do all the things she tells me I’m capable I’m doing. My other teammates have done that, too, but I spend a lot more time with LC.”

Cox was sitting nearby as Ursin said those words, and she smiled in response.

“It means a lot. Me and Moon are really close,” Cox said. “We’re roommates on the road and hang out off the court sometimes. To see her succeed, I’m so proud of her. She’s playing really well, playing to her potential.”

2K and 1K for Kalani: Baylor senior reaches career milestones

By CHAD CONINE Special to the Tribune-Herald Feb 20, 2019

If Kalani Brown wore sleeves with her uniform, they would’ve been rolled up as the center went to work in the fourth quarter against Kansas on Wednesday night.

Brown entered the game needing 11 points and two rebounds to reach 2,000 career points and 1,000 career rebounds. She quickly gathered in the two boards she needed, but left the Lady Bears fans at the Ferrell Center in suspense for most of the game as they awaited her 2,000th point.

The Baylor center, flanked by multiple Kansas defenders for most of the night, had four points and halftime and was still stuck at four through three quarters.

However, when the fourth quarter arrived, Brown got an “I’m going to do this” look in her eyes.

“They were hanging on me all game and Coach (Kim Mulkey) was like, ‘I know they’re hanging on you, I’m fighting for you,’” Brown said. “At one point I was just like, ‘You know what? Whatever. I’ve just got to power through them.’”

She caught the ball near the block with just under six minutes left, powered to the rack for a layup while getting fouled and completed the 3-point play to get to seven points.

It was more of the same on the next trip down the floor, as guard Juicy Landrum got the ball to Brown for a layup with 5:17 remaining.

Finally, Lauren Cox drew a crowd in the lane and dished to Brown for an inside basket with 3:51 left that brought the Lady Bears fans to their feet.

“It’s only appropriate that Lauren Cox is the one that gave her that last pass so she could score,” Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said.

Brown pulled down her 1,000th-career rebound with 5:43 left in the first quarter. Ironically, it wasn’t one the Baylor center had to battle for as it came after Kansas guard Brooklyn Mitchell missed a free throw and the other Jayhawks had already retreated to the Lady Bears’ offensive end.

In hitting both marks, Brown became the sixth Lady Bear to reach 2,000 points and 1,000 rebounds, joining Suzie Snider Eppers, Brittney Griner, Sophia Young, Maggie Davis-Stinnett and Nina Davis.

Brown entered this season with 1,623 points and 826 rebounds after she averaged a double-double (20.1 points, 10.2 boards) as a junior in the 2017-18 campaign. After scoring 11 points and grabbing 14 rebounds on Wednesday, she has five double-doubles this season, including an impressive 22 points and 17 rebounds in the Lady Bears victory over top-ranked Connecticut on Jan. 3.

The Baylor center credited her teammates for getting her the ball, both against Kansas and throughout the last four seasons.

As Lady Bears’ latest victory reached the late stages, the Baylor bench and players became more and more vocal about helping Brown get to the scoring mark.

“Our game plan was to hit Kalani in the fourth quarter,” guard DiDi Richards said. “Hit Kalani, hit Kalani.”

They did, and Brown made it count.

Big 12 notebook: Championships should trump stats on awards, Mulkey says

By BRICE CHERRY bcherry@wacotrib.com Mar 9, 2019

OKLAHOMA CITY Press — Kim Mulkey respects Iowa State’s Bridget Carleton as a player. The Cyclones guard averaged 21.9 points per game on the season, and was even more productive in a pair of losses to Baylor, scoring 28 in both games.

But does the Baylor coach think Kalani Brown or Lauren Cox would have been worthy choices as Big 12 Player of the Year?

You’d better believe it.

Carleton won that honor earlier in the week, based on a vote by the league’s coaches. Her stats certainly made a compelling case — she led the conference in scoring and steals, and ranked fifth in rebounding and sixth in assists.

Mulkey said that team success should count for something too, though.

“All the kids who won individual awards, congratulations to them,” said Mulkey, following the Lady Bears’ 100-61 win over Texas Tech at the Big 12 tournament on Saturday. “It’s just hard for me to accept that an individual award (goes) to a kid that shoots 15 to 20 times a game. For her team, she needs to do that. I can’t fault any kid that does that.

“But if you’re playing on a team, the team that spreads the wealth the most is usually the team that’s going to win championships. So, why do we not reward those great players who could go to those other schools and shoot it 30 times a game, but they choose to come to a team where it’s about the team and about championships? Why don’t we reward those kids? I struggle with that.”

Mulkey went on to express her desire that the Big 12 coaches would sign their names to their ballots, so every vote would be public. She also added that she’d gladly give up her Big 12 Coach of the Year honor if it meant honoring Brown.

“Why did I get Coach of the Year? Because I coach a great team,” Mulkey said. “But yet we can’t reward those kids? I would take my Coach of the Year any day and give it to them, because I am only as good as those kids.”

Midnight strikes on Cinderella

Baylor’s victory snapped a run of games at the Big 12 tournament in which the lower-seeded team nabbed the win.

In both of Friday’s opening games in OKC, the lower seed advanced. The ninth-seeded Lady Raiders of Texas Tech drilled eighth-seeded Oklahoma, 104-84, setting a single-game tournament scoring record in the process. Tech’s Brittany Brewer blazed the nets for 40 points in that game, breaking the Big 12 tourney record for most points in a first-round game.

In Friday’s other game, 10th-seeded Kansas outplayed seventh-seeded Oklahoma State, 76-66. Then fifth-seeded Kansas State continued the “upset” trend by pushing past fourth-seeded

West Virginia, 72-59.

Wildcats feeling their oats

No matter what happens Sunday against Baylor, Kansas State coach Jeff Mittie expressed confidence that his team would gain an NCAA tournament invitation when all was said and done.

The Wildcats moved to 21-10 following their win over West Virginia. They've won six straight games, and swept their season series with 21st-ranked Texas.

"I felt like we were in before this (West Virginia) game," Mittie said. "We probably don't have time in the presser to talk about the wins we have had, but they're probably – with the exception of Baylor and the exception of Oregon and the exception of some of the teams that have won their league – there is not a hotter team in the country right now than us."

Bickle tickles twine when she gets her shot

When Baylor freshman Caitlin Bickle knocked down a 3-pointer late in the Lady Bears' win over Tech, it marked the most points she'd scored since December.

Bickle has three double-figure scoring games on the season, the last coming on Dec. 31, when she put up 10 points in eight minutes of action against UT-Rio Grande Valley. Since then, she had played sparingly, scoring two points in a game twice and one point on another instance.

Still, she was ready to pull the trigger when she got her chance.

"It's not anything about confidence or anything like that," said Bickle, a forward from Cave Creek, Arizona. "It's kind of like when she put in the subs, you just play the role that she needs you to play. And I think we all did that really, really well in the fourth quarter against their starters. I guess the subs being out there just kind of shows how good our second lineup is."

Big 12 notebook: Grieving Ursin draws support from Lady Bear teammates

By BRICE CHERRY bcherry@wacotrib.com Mar 10, 2019

OKLAHOMA CITY — Baylor's Moon Ursin played Sunday's Big 12 tournament semifinal with a heavy heart, just a day after the death of her grandfather, Clarence Alexander.

Ursin, a sophomore from Destrehan, La., said she was extremely close with her grandpa. But she didn't hesitate in making the decision to stick around her team, adding that the game allowed her to focus on something else for a while.

"He was my everything. And he's also the first person that I ever lost," said Ursin, who played 13 minutes and contributed four rebounds and three assists in Baylor's 88-60 win over Kansas State. "And he's a grandparent. I mean, grandparents, you know? My grandfather, I spent every summer with him until about my junior year of high school, every summer at my grandparents' house. And he meant absolutely everything to me."

Since learning of her grandfather's passing on Saturday, Ursin said she has been overwhelmed with support from her basketball family on the Lady Bears. Some of her teammates – including DiDi Richards earlier this season – have lost grandparents or other loved ones, so they've been there, too.

"I've lost two grandmothers," Baylor center Kalani Brown said. "I know how special they are, especially when you're close to them. We've just been loving on her, trying to make her laugh, just so she can think about as less as possible. So it doesn't affect her game. She played well today, despite having that bad news yesterday. I'm just proud of her. There's not really much you can do or say, just saying encouraging words and keeping her focused."

Ursin was grateful that her teammates have been quick with a hug or an encouraging word, and that they've let her cry as much as she wanted.

"I knew it was going to be hard. It's been hard since I found out," Ursin said. "I would just start crying sometimes. But there's absolutely nothing I can do until I can get there with my family, and that's when I can just really drop down, if I have to. But I'm here now. I've got my teammates. I've got my coaches, fans, everyone who's supporting. For these 40 minutes I've just got to focus on basketball."

BU's Brown wanted quicker whistle in dust-up with Beard

Most players don't want to hear the referee's whistle. With six minutes to play in the fourth, however, Baylor's Kalani Brown was begging for one.

Brown and Kansas State's Jasauen Beard got tangled up, and then tempers flared. The players barked at one another, and the officials hit them each with a technical foul as teammates yanked them away.

"I blocked the shot and then I grabbed the rebound, and she was trying to get the ball from me," Brown said. "And I was looking at the ref like, 'Hey, I'm holding onto the ball, can you call the foul?' So, mostly I blame the refs for not stopping it while it was still going. They just let it happen. That's what makes me upset – that you let it happen, let it get to that point, when you could have stopped it. He was standing right there, under the basket. And no call. It just escalated badly, and I just blame the refs, because you could have stopped it and you didn't."

Baylor's Lauren Cox turned in the assist of the night by pulling Brown away before the encounter escalated any further.

"I've always kept Lauren a cool head, so this time she had to do it. And Chloe (Jackson)," Brown said. "She and Chloe had to help me out. Usually I'm not the one getting frustrated, I'm the one pulling them apart. Teammates had my back today."

30 cheers for Baylor women

Reaching the 30-win plateau has become an annual ritual for Baylor.

By defeating K-State on Sunday, the Lady Bears chalked up win No. 30 on the year. That marks the ninth straight season that they've reached 30 wins, and the 10th time under head coach Kim Mulkey. In all, the program owns 14 seasons of 30 or more wins, including four in the AIAW days under Olga Fallen.

ISU's Carleton, BU's Brown to face off in final contest

In addition to a Big 12 tournament championship, Monday's final will also pit the league's last two Conference Player of the Year winners.

Iowa State's Bridget Carleton won the honor this year from the league's coaches. Carleton turned in 17 points, 10 rebounds and five assists in the second-seeded Cyclones' 75-69 win over third-seeded Texas on Sunday.

Kalani Brown was the unanimous Big 12 Player of the Year in 2018 for Baylor. In the Lady Bears' 88-60 win over Kansas State, she scored 24 points on 10-of-14 shooting to go with nine rebounds and one blocked shot.

Crown them, again: Lady Bears grind out 10th Big 12 tournament title over Iowa State, 67-49

By BRICE CHERRY bcherry@wacotrib.com Mar 11, 2019

OKLAHOMA CITY — A funny thing happened on the way to another Baylor laugh. Iowa State showed up and said, nope, we're not going to be a punchline.

Nevertheless, Baylor had the last laugh.

The No. 1-ranked Lady Bears responded to Iowa State's charge by putting together a furious fourth-quarter kick on their way to a 67-49 win over the Cyclones in the Big 12 tournament final on Monday night at Chesapeake Energy Arena. It's the 10th Big 12 tourney title for Baylor (31-1), which also owns 10 regular-season banners in its ever-growing collection.

The Lady Bears definitely had to work for this one.

The second-seeded Cyclones (25-8) showed no small measure of gumption and grit in climbing out of a first-quarter hole. Throughout the second and third periods, Iowa State basically traded jabs with Baylor, standing toe-to-toe with the league's longtime heavyweight champs.

After three quarters, it seemed to be anybody's game, with Baylor clinging to a 48-44 advantage and both sets of fans raucously reacting to every play.

In the fourth, though, Baylor pulled away by doing what Baylor does. It's a basic two-step process — pound the ball into the paint, where those twin towers Kalani Brown and Lauren Cox reside. And number two, make your opponent work for every shot.

Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said she challenged Brown and Cox at halftime, so she was happy to see them answer the bell.

"I said to both of them, you're a combined, and I forget what it was, but it wasn't good. I said if you're as good as people say you are, then you'll work your way through it," Mulkey said. "And they did. ... Those kids are experienced players, they've seen it all."

Baylor's pound-the-paint strategy proved as sound as ever. Baylor outscored Iowa State, 19-5, in the fourth. Cox and Brown loomed especially large, and finished with a combined 31 points, 15 rebounds and five blocked shots. But guards Chloe Jackson and Moon Ursin also stepped up and knocked down some clutch shots in the final stretch, as the Lady Bears found their runaway after all.

Meanwhile, on the other end, Baylor held its ground defensively, and the Cyclones wilted. Iowa State shot just 2-for-10 (20 percent) from the floor in the fourth and committed six turnovers.

"Their defense was really good in the fourth quarter," Iowa State's Alexa Middleton said. "We weren't able to execute like we wanted to. Right there with them in the third quarter, we survived the surge they usually have in the third quarter, just couldn't get it done in the fourth."

By the time that Iowa State sharpshooter Bridget Carleton lost the handle on the ball and Jackson picked it up and darted downcourt for a breakaway layup with 5:07 to go, the Lady Bears were feeling it. They stretched their lead to 59-46, forcing Iowa State coach Bill Fennelly to call his second timeout of the quarter to try to stop the bleeding.

But Baylor wasn't done, and neither was Jackson. With 3:09 to play, Jackson swished in a tough step-back jumper right in front of the Lady Bears' bench, which practically lost their minds in delight.

"All credit to my teammates," Jackson said. "They gave me that confidence that I could knock down a shot, and Coach talked about it earlier, pay attention to the shot clock. I knew I had to do something with this."

Jackson scored 16 points on 8-of-14 shooting to go with five rebounds and five assists. Brown dropped in a team-high 17 points for Baylor on her way to the tournament's Most Outstanding Player. She was joined on the all-tournament team by Cox (14 points, eight rebounds and three blocks in the finale), along with Iowa State's Carleton and Alexa Middleton, and Texas' Sug Sutton.

In a contrast from the games of the previous two days, Baylor refused to allow its opponent seize the early momentum. Displaying the proficient level of passing befitting a team that leads the country in assists per game, the Lady Bears delivered assists on six of their first eight baskets on their way to a 18-6 lead.

At that point, Baylor looked as dominant as ever. It was getting whatever it wanted offensively, whether it was Chloe Jackson scooping to the hoop on driving forays or Kalani Brown taking up residence in the deep post for easy dump-ins.

Furthermore, Baylor had effectively taken ISU star Bridget Carleton, the conference coaches' choice as Big 12 Player of the Year, out of the game. Through the first eight minutes, Carleton was 0-for-2 from the floor with no points.

But with 1:46 left in the quarter, Carleton sank a deep 3-pointer with the hand of DiDi Richards in her face, and that shot seemed to breathe new life into the Cyclones. Juicy Landrum turned the ball over on the ensuing possession, Alyssa Middleton scored on the other end on a difficult reverse layup, and the Cyclones were off and running.

Iowa State closed the first quarter on a 7-0 run, then kept the snowball rolling downhill to open up the second. The Cyclones extended the run to 12-0, tying the game at 18 on Middleton's trey. Baylor finally snapped a nearly six-minute drought between field goals when NaLyssa Smith banged in a baseline jumper off a pass from Lauren Cox. But it was clear that this wasn't going to be another blowout for the Lady Bears.

Middleton turned in a terrific game for Iowa State, as she ran Baylor's defenders ragged for three quarters. She finished with a game-high 18 points on 7-of-12 from the floor. However, Middleton didn't score in the fourth, as Ursin and DiDi Richards stayed in her hip pocket and harassed her on every Iowa State possession.

"They're just amazing defenders. That's all I can say," Jackson said of her teammates Richards and Ursin. "They're great, they do a great job."

NaLyssa Smith gave Baylor a spark in the first half, when Brown and Cox were a combined 5-of-15 from the floor. The freshman forward out of the San Antonio area crashed the glass with a fervor, and tied for high-point honors with eight first-half points to go with three rebounds.

Mulkey said that Smith hit "the freshman wall" at one point during the conference season, but the coach believes the player has crashed through that barrier of mental and physical fatigue.

"She has to live it, and it's good to see her at this time of year, because we need that kid," the coach said. "That's what I told her coming off the floor – 'It's good to see you back.'"

Baylor likely had a No. 1 seed locked up before the Big 12 tournament ever began. But by virtue of sweeping its way through OKC, the Lady Bears stated a resounding case to be the No. 1 overall seed when the NCAA brackets are revealed on Monday, March 18. Baylor will host a watch party at the Stone Room of the Ferrell Center at 6 p.m. that day.

Big 12 notebook: Baylor's Brown outplays Iowa State's Carleton, wins tourney MOP

By BRICE CHERRY bcherry@wacotrib.com Mar 11, 2019

OKLAHOMA CITY — It's not a one-on-one game. Technically, they didn't even guard one another.

But chalk up a victory for Kalani Brown in the "Best Player in the Big 12" debate. If it even is a debate anymore.

Monday night's Big 12 tournament final served up a matchup between the league's last two Big 12 Players of the Year, in Iowa State guard Bridget Carleton and Brown, Baylor's senior post.

Though she struggled to get buckets at time in the first half, Brown still proved more than Iowa State could handle by the end of the game. She ended up with 17 points and seven rebounds, and won the tournament's Most Outstanding Player honor for the second straight year.

Iowa State's Carleton also made the all-tournament team, but she had to work doggedly for her baskets in Monday's game. She shot 6-of-16 from the floor and finished with 13 points. That tied for her second-lowest output in a game this season, as she scored seven in just 20 minutes in a blowout win over Prairie View A&M on Dec. 19.

Baylor's Big 12 title haul reaches 20

Make it a 20-pack for the Lady Bears.

Baylor's victory over Iowa State on Monday gave the Lady Bears their 10th Big 12 tournament title in program history. Combine that with their 10 regular-season crowns, and that's an even 20 Big 12 titles in all.

It also marked the ninth time that Baylor has pulled off the sweep of both banners. The Lady Bears also swept the regular-season and conference tournament championships in 2005, 2011, '12, '13, '14, '15, '16 and '18.

Lady Bears show defensive ferocity in fourth

Baylor's fourth-quarter defense wasn't just good — it was historically nasty.

When the Lady Bears held Iowa State to a mere five points in the fourth quarter, it marked the fewest points in a quarter by any team in a Big 12 championship game.

Of course, the NCAA didn't institute quarters until the 2015-16 season — before then, teams played two 20-minute halves — but still, five points? That's getting it done defensively.

"The only team tougher is our football team, probably," said Iowa State coach Bill Fennelly.

Baylor finishes No. 1 in AP women's hoops poll

By Associated Press March 18, 2019 1:01 pm

NEW YORK (AP) — Baylor coach Kim Mulkey knew her team was going to be pretty good this season. She just didn't know how good because the Lady Bears had too many unknowns.

They turned out to be the best team in the country before the NCAA Tournament, finishing as a unanimous No. 1 in the last Associated Press women's basketball poll of the season released

Monday.

"I don't know that I had the expectations that we were going to finish No. 1, start No. 1," Mulkey said. "I had the expectation that we were one of about five or six teams that could win it all, and that could be ranked high. But I knew we would be a top team."

The Lady Bears, who have been atop the rankings for eight weeks, received all 28 first-place votes from a national media panel Monday. It's the third time in school history that the team finished with the No. 1 ranking. Baylor was the top choice in 2012 and 2013 in the final poll.

"It doesn't bring me the satisfaction that a national championship would," Mulkey said of being No. 1. "What it does mean is that we're still relevant. We're still a talked-about team and on a national scale."

The Lady Bears have won 23 straight games — the longest winning streak in the country. They are expected to be a top seed in the NCAA Tournament when the field is announced Monday night.

UConn, Notre Dame, Mississippi State and Louisville follow Baylor.

There was no change in the top 11 teams in the poll with most of the teams finishing their conference tournaments last week. Stanford, Oregon, Iowa, Maryland and N.C. State round out the first 10 teams in the poll.

DePaul entered the Top 25 after beating Marquette to win the Big East championship. The Golden Eagles fell five places to 18. Drake fell out of the poll.

Here are some other tidbits from the AP Top 25 this week:

MATCHING ANDY: UConn coach Geno Auriemma earned his 522nd ranking with UConn moving him into a tie with former Georgia coach Andy Landers for third place on the all-time coaches ranking list. Both coaches did it at one school. Auriemma trails Tara VanDerveer (558) and Pat Summitt (618).

CONFERENCE SUPREMACY: Six ACC teams earned rankings in the final poll led by Notre Dame and Louisville. The Pac-12 was next with five teams in. The Southeastern Conference had four and the Big 12 had three. The Big East and Big Ten each had two teams ranked with the West Coast Conference, American and Conference USA each having one.

How the women's NCAA bracket-leak couldn't take the shine off Baylor's top overall seeding

By Ben Baby, Staff Writer Contact Ben Baby on Twitter: @Ben_Baby

When the NCAA women's tournament bracket was officially unveiled on Monday afternoon, the suspense was gone for most of the 64-team field.

But that couldn't take the luster off of Baylor's accomplishment. For the third time in four years, Baylor earned a No. 1 seed heading into the tournament.

However, it might be more noteworthy this season. Baylor (31-1) earned the tournament's top overall seed. It will host 16-seed Abilene Christian (23-9) at 4:30 p.m. Saturday in Waco, which will host first- and second-round games of the Greensboro region.

Baylor's sixth No. 1 seed since 2011 is a reward for one of the team's best seasons in recent years. And the momentum generated from the team's current 23-game winning streak could push Baylor to the Final Four for the first time since it won the national championship in 2012.

"I think it's always important to be relevant, first, and, secondly, to maintain a level of relevancy. And I think this program has done it year in and year out," Baylor coach Kim Mulkey said during an ESPN interview.

The postseason fates of Baylor and several other schools around the country was revealed inadvertently before ESPN's TV selection show. During a show on one of the network's channels earlier in the afternoon, the majority of the bracket's pairings were unveiled in a graphic on the side of the screen.

ESPN moved up its official selection show by two hours and apologized for the gaffe.

"In the midst of our preparation the bracket was mistakenly posted on ESPNU," the network said in a statement. "We deeply regret the error and extend our apology to the NCAA and the women's basketball community."

But had the snafu not occurred, the drama around Baylor's seeding would have been lacking. Mulkey's team enjoyed one of its best seasons in years. It climbed to the top of the Associated Press poll for the first time since 2012-13. Baylor won every conference game this season. The average margin of victory in its three victories at the Big 12 tournament was 28.3 points.

Now comes the tricky part -- making it back to the Final Four.

The path to the tournament semifinals in Tampa, Fla., includes a potential Sweet 16 match-up against 4-seed South Carolina, which is bringing back four starters from last year's team that reached the Elite Eight. Stanford, the only team to beat Baylor this season, is a No. 2 seed on the other side of the bracket.

Mulkey's team is led by senior center Kalani Brown and junior forward Lauren Cox, a pair who combined for 34.6 percent of the team's scoring this season. But Mulkey said there's more to this year's team besides its post players, including grad transfer guard Chloe Jackson.

"I think we have a little bit of everything to help our bigs inside," Mulkey told ESPN.

Hey 19: Baylor women still among nation's best under Kim Mulkey

March 21, 2019, By Stephen Hawkins Associated Press

Baylor coach Kim Mulkey's two children were on the ladder with her when she cut down the net after the Lady Bears won their first national championship in 2005.

Mulkey has already climbed two ladders this year, when Baylor clinched another Big 12 regular-season title and then after winning the conference tournament. She was joined both times by daughter Makenzie Fuller, now one of her former players and part of her staff, and held her 5-month-old grandson.

"As Kramer says, I've been replaced," Mulkey said, referring to her son, a minor league infielder in the St. Louis Cardinals organization who was already at spring training. "I said, 'Well, if you were home, you'd be on that ladder with us.' We'd just get a bigger ladder."

While her children are now young adults and Mulkey is a grandmother, one thing hasn't changed. Baylor is still among the nation's best teams in Mulkey's 19th season as coach.

The Lady Bears (31-1) are the No. 1 overall seed and take a 23-game winning streak into the NCAA Tournament. They open Saturday against Abilene Christian at home, where they have won 14 consecutive NCAA games.

In a 15-season stretch starting with that 2005 national title, they also had a 40-0 season in 2012 and have won 10 Big 12 regular-season championships and 10 conference tournaments. They have been to the Sweet 16 the past 10 seasons, and all 18 of the school's NCAA Tournament appearances have come under her watch.

Mulkey got a bit emotional after the Big 12 championship game when someone brought up the long-term success of the program, which was coming off a 20-loss season when she was hired in April 2000.

"I don't reflect on it myself and sometimes it's hard for me to comprehend just what has taken place here with the great players through the years and how difficult that it is to maintain," said Mulkey, the first person to win national championships as a player, assistant coach and head coach.

"I guess it was just in my mind and heart when the game was over that I needed to share with all of Baylor nation, and what was shared was me," she said. "It's mind-boggling to sustain and maintain that as long as we have."

Mulkey described this as maybe her most enjoyable season of coaching, with a group of happy kids who play for each other. It follows one of the most difficult and emotional years in the coach's life. Only a week into the 2017-18 season, Fuller was about 18 weeks into her pregnancy with her first child, Mulkey's first grandchild, when the baby girl was stillborn.

About two months later, former player Chameka Scott died of colon cancer at age 33. Scott was one of Mulkey's first recruits at Baylor, and the coach called her "the heartbeat" of the 2005 championship team.

Baylor went into the postseason last year after point guard Kristy Wallace tore her ACL in her knee in the regular-season finale.

"You keep your faith, you surround yourself with people who make you keep the faith when you're at your lowest moment," Mulkey said. "And this year, to this point, has been probably one of the, if not the, most enjoyable year of my coaching career. Not because of the record, but because of those kids in that locker room."

The players are led by 6-foot-7 senior center Kalani Brown and fellow post Lauren Cox. Chloe Jackson made the unexpected adjustment to being the primary point guard after being the program's first graduate transfer, while Juicy Landrum has been a reliable shooter and Didi Richards a top defender. There is also a talented group of five true freshmen getting playing time.

"This is a special team, and it's just surreal," Jackson said. "This is what I came here for. ... I wouldn't want to do it with another group of girls."

Baylor swept through Big 12 play undefeated for the fourth time, and its league schedule started right after an 11-point home win over powerhouse UConn in January that snapped the Huskies' record 126-game winning streak in regular-season games. The Lady Bears were the unanimous No. 1 team in the final Top 25 poll that came out this week.

"They're just happy kids. They come to practice happy, and on their worst days, they work," Mulkey said. "They're just pulling for each other. ... They're just a joy to be around, they're a joy to coach. It makes it all worthwhile. It makes it fun to go to work every day."

Hey 19: Baylor women still among nation's best under Kim Mulkey

March 22, 2019, By Ben Baby Dallas Morning News

WACO -- Sitting next to two cell phones and a home phone, Kim Mulkey keeps a notepad and pen on the nightstand next to her bed in case of emergencies.

Sometimes, in the middle of the night, the Baylor women's basketball coach will jot down what is on her mind -- a thought, a play design or a feeling she is grappling with. At one point last year, she grabbed the pad and started writing in the dark about a sense of hypocrisy.

Mulkey wasn't comfortable with the concept of graduate transfers, even after Baylor landed guard Chloe Jackson from LSU. But as the season progressed and she continued to coach Jackson, Mulkey changed her mind.

In recent years, football and men's basketball programs have used graduate transfers to bolster their teams. Baylor is in the second round of the men's tournament partly because of guard Makai Mason, who received his bachelor's degree at Yale before joining the Bears this year.

That trend now extends to women's basketball. Two starters from last year's Texas A&M team that reached the Sweet 16 left as graduate transfers in the offseason. The Aggies responded by adding Maryland's Aja Ellison, who helped them earn a No. 4 seed in this year's tournament. Mulkey is aware the same thing can happen to Baylor

"It can devastate a program when you lose a graduate transfer that you spend all this time with," Mulkey said. "But yet, there's also those programs that reap those rewards on the other end. And we understand it could happen to us."

By the time Jackson arrived at Baylor, she was very familiar with the transfer process. She left North Carolina State after her freshman season in search of more playing time.

The Maryland native found that in Baton Rouge, where she was LSU's leading scorer last season. But after the Tigers were upset in the first round of the tournament, she wanted to make a significant postseason run her senior year.

And she was willing to sacrifice any personal stats to make that happen.

"I knew my role [at LSU], so it was kind of like a leap of faith coming here," Jackson said. "I knew it was going to be out of my comfort zone, but I wanted the challenge so I just embraced it."

Turns out, it was going to be a bigger challenge than she anticipated. In the offseason, Baylor dismissed guard Alexis Morris following an assault arrest in San Marcos. Morris was considered one of the top freshmen in the conference in 2017-18.

In addition to trying to mesh with a new team, Jackson was suddenly Baylor's starting point guard, a position she last held during her senior year of high school.

In the summer, she started to get a feel for where Baylor post players Kalani Brown and Lauren Cox wanted the ball. She built chemistry with her team by joining them for sand volleyball games around town, even if that wasn't her sport.

Jackson, like Baylor, was adapting to a new reality. By March, it didn't feel as if Jackson had only been in Waco for a year.

"I don't think she tried to force anything," Cox said. "She just came in and we all kind of clicked and meshed together."

Jackson is hoping to be part of Baylor's first run to the Final Four since the Lady Bears won the 2012 national championship. Senior forward Kalani Brown said that in addition to having a deeper bench, this year's team has benefited from its selflessness.

"I would have to say my stats have dropped since last year, but we're winning and we're playing some good team basketball and that's all that matters," said Brown, the 2017-18 Big 12 Player of the Year. "I could not play, but if we're going to the Final Four that way, then that's the thing, you know?"

If Baylor wins Saturday, it will host No. 8 seed Cal or No. 9 seed North Carolina on Monday at the Ferrell Center, with a Sweet 16 berth on the line. It's the experience Jackson wanted when she decided to transfer for her senior year.

But not matter what happens over the next few weeks, Jackson's impact will resonate long after she leaves Waco. After the guard's success this year, Mulkey said she plans to keep one scholarship available each year for a graduate transfer.

"It's not going to bother me if everybody's going to say Baylor's going to be the graduate transfer university now in women's basketball," Mulkey said. "And I think I'd have to give credit to Chloe."

NCAA Waco notebook: Baylor fans make Ferrell Center farewell special for Lady Bears

March 25, 2019, By Chad Conine Waco Tribune-Herald

When it was all over at the Ferrell Center, the Baylor fans seemed like they wanted an encore.

The Lady Bears fans gave several long cheers as their team took it all in for a few minutes before leaving the floor. Baylor defeated California, 102-63, on Monday night, but there was more at play in the big gold dome on University Parks.

It's been quite a run this season for Baylor on its home court. A few weeks ago, the Lady Bears celebrated their ninth consecutive and 10th overall Big 12 championship by having a grand, net-cutting, postgame party after defeating Oklahoma State.

On that same night, Baylor center Kalani Brown notched her 2,000th career point and 1,000th career rebound.

All of that helped the Lady Bears earn a chance to host the first two rounds of the NCAA Tournament. But now Baylor is officially done playing home games at the Ferrell Center this season.

That made it all a little bittersweet for Brown

"I'm going to miss it for sure," Brown said in the postgame press conference. "I'm a little sad, but I just want to thank Baylor Nation. I'm so grateful."

to prepare for Monday's 8 p.m. tipoff, followed it up by coaxing them to get on a plane to Greensboro, N.C., for the Sweet 16.

But whether or not they're going to Carolina, Mulkey was appreciative of the Lady Bears faithful who showed up this season and this weekend.

"The fans, God bless 'em because they love women's basketball here at Baylor," Mulkey said.

Shutting down Cal's star

Cal's 6-foot-4 center Kristine Anigwe entered the NCAA Tournament second-round matchup with Baylor having posted 33 consecutive double-doubles, tied for the second-most in NCAA history.

Anigwe also had a double-double in the Ferrell Center in NCAA Tournament play to her credit as she finished with 20 points and 11 rebounds when Baylor defeated the Golden Bears in the second round two years ago.

But not this time.

Anigwe scored 13 points, but Baylor boxed her out and kept her to five rebounds, breaking the streak.

"The kid has had a year that should be in the history books, will be in the history books of women's college basketball," Cal coach Lindsay Gottlieb said. "She had a tough night tonight. They can do what some other teams can't do against us is why it was a terrible matchup for us."

Mulkey praised her entire lineup of front court players for the job they did in keeping Anigwe off the boards. The Baylor coach said she thought defense, rebounding and depth would all be big factors, so the effort by those players in the paint tilted all three in the Lady Bears' favor.

"When you talk about rebounding, (Anigwe) played 33 minutes and had (5) rebounds and I can't help but look at NaLyssa Smith and Aquira DeCosta and Queen Egbo," Mulkey said. "That's three freshmen. They play 11 minutes and they have unbelievable stats. So there is the rebounding and also the depth that I thought would play a factor."

Smith had 13 points and 8 rebounds in 11 minutes. Egbo posted 8 points and 6 boards in 11 minutes, and DeCosta finished with 6 points and 6 rebounds in 8 minutes.

Into enemy territory

South Carolina punched its ticket to the Greensboro Regional tournament when the No. 4 seed Gamecocks defeated No. 5 seed Florida State, 72-64, on Sunday in Charlotte, N.C.

That means South Carolina had a short trip home to Columbia, S.C., (92 miles) and has another quick hop to Greensboro, N.C., (183 miles) this weekend.

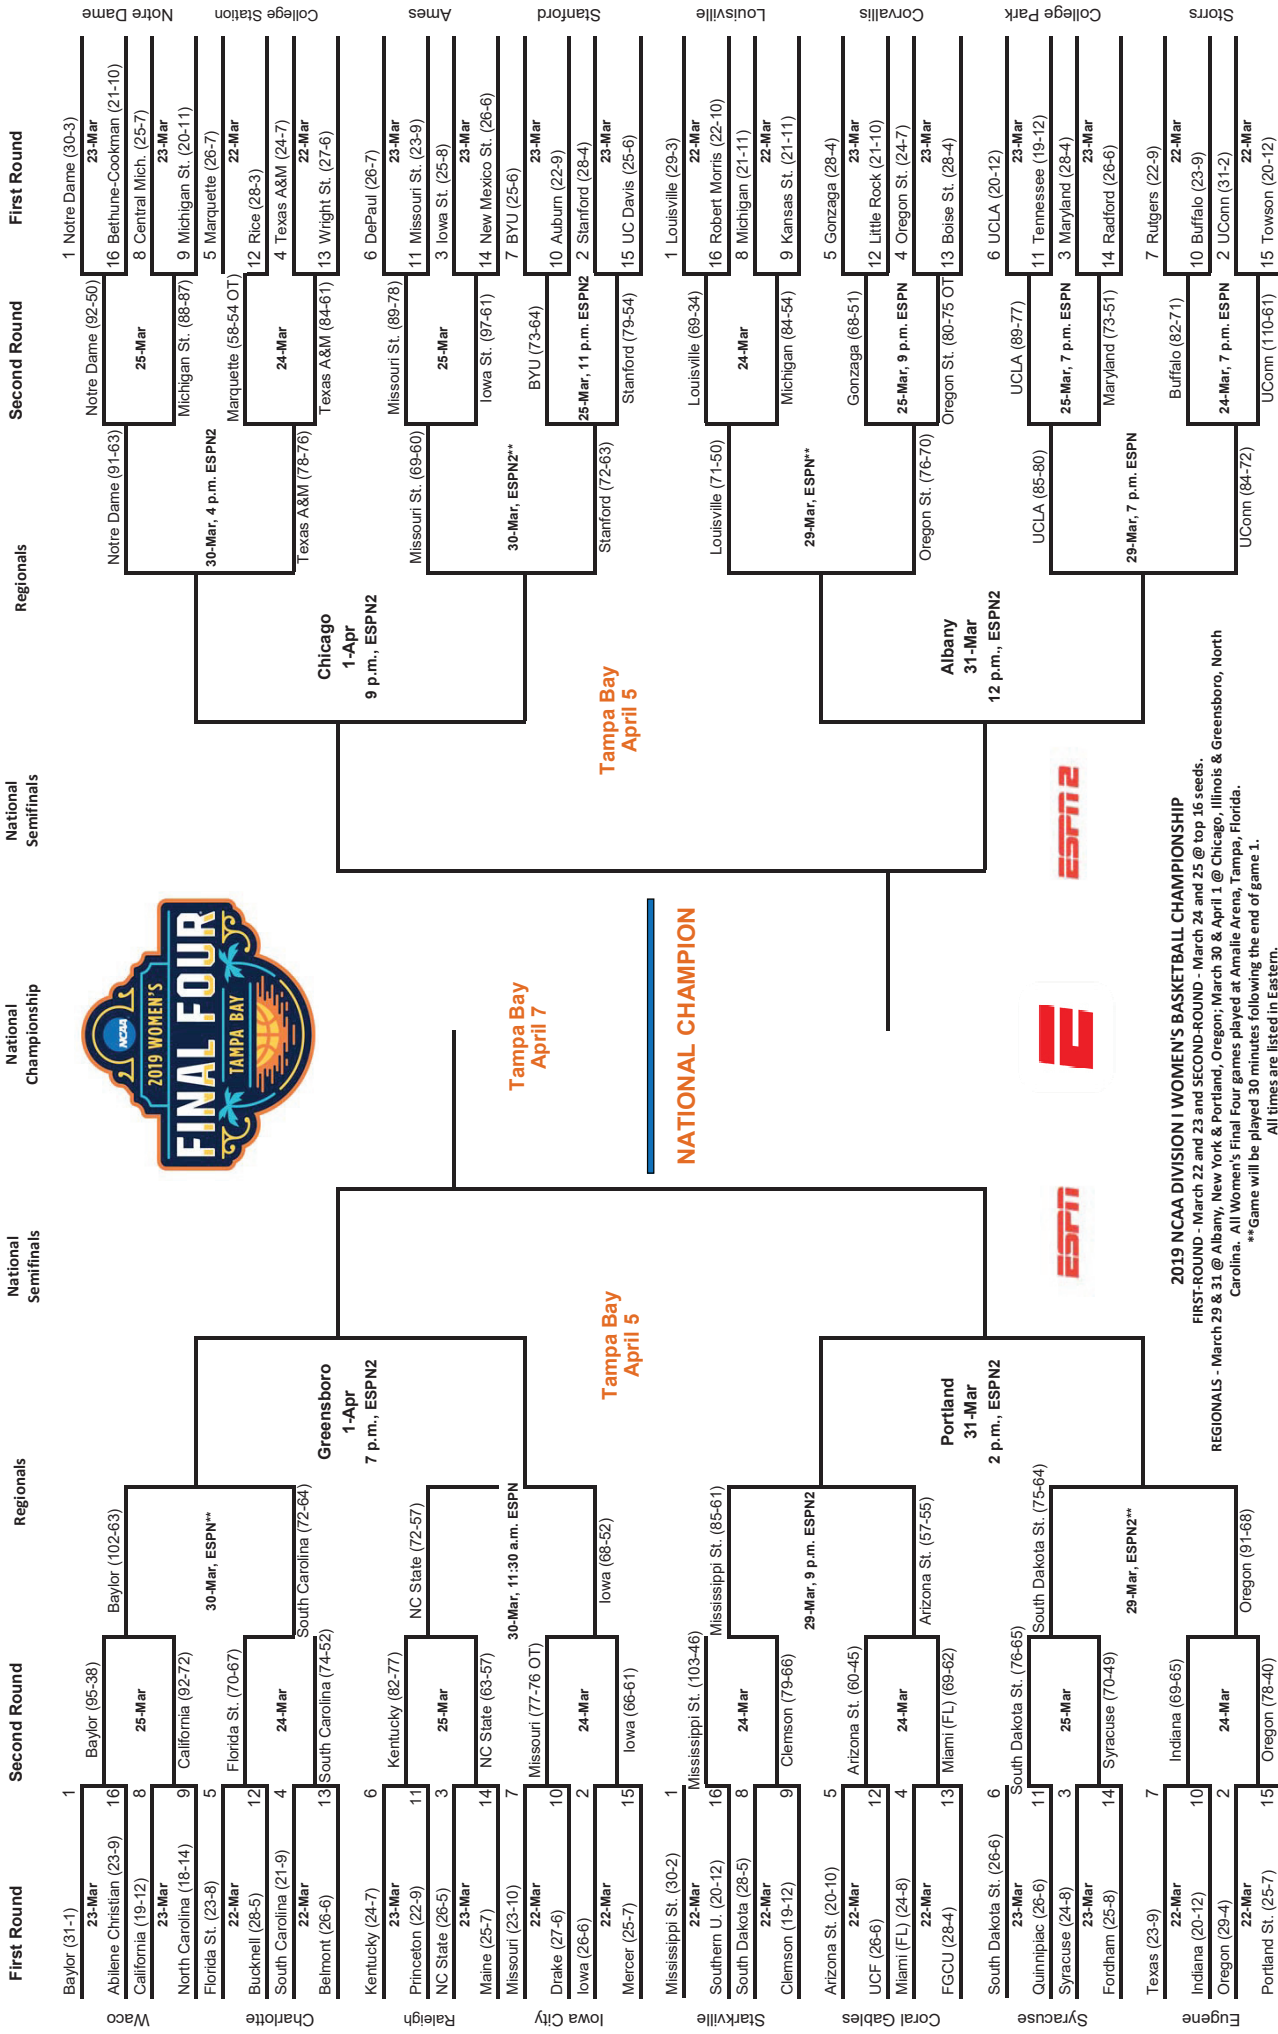

In contrast, Baylor will be traveling more than 1,100 miles to its Sweet 16 destination. But the Lady Bears have one comforting thought to take with them on the road since they defeated South Carolina in Columbia, 94-69, on Dec. 2.

"Do I like the fact that we've already played them this year or would I rather go into it not knowing much about each other? I don't know," Mulkey said. "But we know what they do, they know what we do. It'll be like a home court to them. ... That's OK. That's OK. We'll go and give it our best shot. Got to win two to get to a Final Four, and it's fun."

Baylor was the final team to secure its spot in the Greensboro Regional and will join South Carolina, No. 2 seed Iowa and No. 3 seed N.C. State in the four-team cage match for a spot in the Final Four in Tampa, Fla.
